Rousseau, Eichmann ... Diver, Nixon Man

VANCOUVER (CP) — Do you know who Jean Jacques Rousseau was? How about Adolf Eichmann?

If you don't know, you're not alone.

Rock singer Elton John, hockey star Bobby Orr and entertainer Barbra Streisand were known to almost every student.

Adam told the SFU Alumni Association Wednesday night that he conducted a two-year survey of 400 students on the subject of "political illiteracy and attitudes of university students."

He said several Canadian universities have adopted compulsory language tests and remedial courses as entrance requirements in reaction to deteriorating functional literacy of students.

"However, hardly any public concern has yet emerged over the equally disturbing facts of political illiteracy," Adam said in his speech.

"Perhaps more disturbing is the blank about leading figures instrumental in the genocide of Jewish people during the Second World War."

Adam said recent notoriety would also explain why Ugandan dictator Idi Amin was known to 32 per cent of the respondents in 1975, but was known to 51 per cent a year later after the Israeli raid on Entebbe.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A picture of a soldier at the wrong time and the wrong place cost Claude Schaffner, 28, of Prince George, B.C., three days in a Mexican jail.

Mr. Schaffner, a hair stylist, said Thursday he was on a tourist trip to Puerto Vallarta last week when he saw a political demonstration. He was taking pictures of the scenery, but his last shot included a uniformed soldier.

"No sooner had I taken the picture when a plainclothes guy toting a machine-gun and two shotguns grabbed me under the arms and pulled me through the public square to some officials seated at a table.

"They sat me down at the table and one of the officials spoke to me in English. They took my camera, exposed the film to destroy it, checked my tourist visa identification, asked me what I was doing."

He was then taken away and put in jail.

Mr. Schaffner said about 60 prisoners were in a 700-square foot area—one American, one German, and the rest Mexican. The cell was "unbelievably filthy, filled with cockroaches, bugs and rats climbing the walls."

He said guards took his rings and jewelry and put them in a bag. In the cell, "the prisoners proceeded to strip me and took my grandfather's pocket watch, a family heirloom."

The third day he was released and his belongings returned.

Mr. Schaffner says he will never go back to Mexico.

Spain in Crisis, Violence Mounts

MADRID — Squads of armed guerrillas attacked police with bombs and submachineguns in at least three Madrid neighborhoods today, killing four and critically wounding four others.

Premier Adolfo Suarez scheduled an emergency cabinet meeting for later today to discuss the wave of political violence that has plunged Spain into its worst crisis since the death of dictator Francisco Franco 14 months ago.

The guerrilla raids came after seven persons were killed in political violence during the week and a senior army general was abducted by urban guerrillas.

In the latest incident, terrorists intercepted a civil guard vehicle on the main Andalucia Highway and threw a bomb or hand grenade inside, killing at least one policeman, police said.

Earlier, two policemen guarding a savings bank in the Camamento area were killed by two men aged about 25 who calmly walked into the bank and shot them with guns equipped with silencers, police said.

In suburban Los Angeles, three gunmen shot and killed two members of the civil guard on duty at a savings bank. Eleven persons were injured in the shooting, according to the news agency Europa Press.

Meanwhile, Spanish opposition leaders, meeting in secret because they feared an armed attack, have called for more-rapid political change despite the recent wave of violence.

Paramilitary civil guards took up positions for Thursday night's meeting to prevent any repetition of Monday's attack on a labor lawyers' office in Madrid, when five persons were shot to death.

Despite the cabinet's tough law-and-order stand, unrest by extreme left wingers was reported Thursday in various parts of the country.

In Madrid, small groups of leftists smashed the windows of banks in the city centre Thursday night but were unable to stage any large demonstration as squads of riot police patrolled in jeeps.

In the northeastern region of Catalonia, where factories were shut down Thursday to protest the Madrid shootings, the government lifted the ban on demonstrations to allow several thousand people to march through Barcelona in silence.

Gas and Oil Up in March

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Retail gasoline prices across Canada will go up by 3 to 3.4 cents a gallon on March 2.

And oil companies are seeking Anti-Inflation Board approval to tack on another 0.5 cents a gallon to prices in eastern Ontario and western Quebec (including Ottawa and Montreal) on the same date.

The price of other petroleum products, notably diesel fuel and home heating oil, will also rise by comparable amounts along with gasoline on March 2.

But with heating oil at least, the price hike will arrive near the end of the winter heating season and much of the impact on the family budget will be postponed until next fall and winter.

The federal department of energy, mines and resources has announced it will allow the wholesale or "posted" prices of petroleum products in Canada to be increased by 2.3 cents a gallon, plus an additional amount for federal sales tax increases, plus any further increases approved by the AIB to cover oil company non-crude cost increases.

Cabbage Leads Vegetable Jump

If you are a cabbage fancier and haven't bought any in the past week or so you are probably in for a bit of a shock.

Poor weather conditions in the U.S. have resulted in increased prices for a number of fresh produce items and the most dramatic change has been in the cost of cabbage.

It has gone up anywhere from 18 per cent to 44 per cent in the past week depending on where you buy it.

However, the word from the wholesalers is that the situation has moderated at the source, the consumer price has peaked and is likely to begin coming down within a week or so.

Other items affected are celery and carrots from California and tomatoes, Zucchini and peppers from Mexico.

The California items are up in price primarily because of drought conditions which have reduced the supply. The supply of the Mexican items is down because of transportation problems.

Citrus fruits, like grapefruit and oranges, could also cost slightly more next week as the result of snow and freezing conditions earlier this month in Florida.

A spokesman in the produce department at Woodward's said the price of cabbage has gone to 39 cents a pound this week, up 15 cents from last week.

Tomatoes are selling this week at 89 cents a pound, an increase of 10 cents over last

North Jails Urged

OTTAWA (CP — Prisons in the northern part of Canada, which would be naturally escape-proof because of isolation and climate, were suggested as one solution to Canada's prison problems Thursday. The suggestion came from a Polish-born sociologist who spent a year in a Siberian prison camp. See story on Page 22.

Hard Line Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — A hard line against strikers and pickets has been urged in a brief from the Employers Council of British Columbia to Labor Minister Allan Williams. The brief has drawn the fire of the B.C. Federation of Labor for an "anti-union stance." See story on Page 3.

United Canada Backed

EVANSTON, Ill. (CP) — The U.S. government intervened Thursday in the debate on Canada's future, asserting American interest in continuing to have a strong northern neighbor.

Ending more than two months of official U.S. silence on the election of a separatist government in Quebec, a state department officer gave a business seminar a delicately-worded declaration of U.S. concern.

John Rouse, head of the Canadian affairs office, told the 100 businessmen that Washington should not and will not seek to influence Canada's internal affairs.

But in what was interpreted by many as a subtle signal of U.S. preference for a united Canada, he said Canada is extremely important to the United States:

"The U.S. government sees a Canada that is vigorous, self-confident, independent and actively engaged internationally as the best northern neighbor we can have.

"And obviously we are interested in any developments which might affect these factors, even marginally."

One source said Rouse's participation in the seminar on business prospects in Quebec was a deliberate and significant state department move.

Rouse said both U.S. government and private American interests should take the situation calmly since any change would be gradual and there are responsible leaders on both sides of the Canadian debate.

Freezing Eastern States Declare Gas Emergencies

Times News Services

Ohio, New York and New Jersey were under energy emergencies today as officials sought to conserve dwindling natural gas supplies. The fuel crisis in the northeastern United States threatened to add more than 250,000 new layoffs to the ranks of the estimated 400,000 already unemployed due to the energy shortage.

Meanwhile, the governors of Florida, Pennsylvania and Tennessee asked President Jimmy Carter to declare their states disaster areas.

And an arctic cold front settling over the Midwest and East was expected to drop temperatures to —20 Celsius and perhaps cause some cuts in natural gas supplies for residential users.

The unusually cold weather east of the Rocky Mountains has closed about 4,000 plants and caused the 400,000 layoffs, federal energy officials say. Officials in several states said they expect application for unemployment benefits and food stamps to soar because of layoffs caused by the natural gas shortages.

Elsewhere in the freeze belt Thursday, officials in Philadelphia declared a state of emergency because of natural gas shortages; blizzard conditions swept northern Illinois and parts of Michigan; the Mississippi, Ohio and Illinois rivers were frozen and barges carrying oil and other supplies remained locked in ice; temperatures hit —34 in North Dakota and Minnesota and —20 in Chicago, and Kentucky agriculture officials estimated animal deaths, production losses and high feed bills were costing the state's farmers an estimated $2 million daily.

In Ottawa the National Energy Board approved the export of up to 2.4 million gallons of liquefied natural gas to the United States.

Holiday Boost Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The government introduced labor-law amendments in the Commons Thursday that would increase the number of legal holidays and vacations for workers under federal law and permit so-called compressed work weeks.

The new legislation would clear the way for adding Boxing Day, the day after Christmas and proposed new Heritage Day on the third Monday in February to the present list of eight national holidays.

However, the labor-law amendments and another bill specifically establishing an annual Heritage Day are unlikley to get through Parliament's crowded schedule in time to take effect this year.

The legislation also opens the way to compressed work weeks such as four 10-hour days by agreement among employer, employees and the federal labor minister.

CLOSURE WARNING

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald served notice today that the government plans to invoke closure — a parliamentary device to limit debate — to force through tax legislation that critics say benefits only the rich.

Macdonald told the Commons that the government will allow only eight more hours of debate on the bill during committee discussion.

The legislation results from the May 25 budget last year, and must be passed by the end of February if benefits are to apply to 1976 income tax returns, the government says.

The bill would increase by $15 million tax benefits to Canadians who buy private retirement plans and sent their children to babysitters.

Government Order Blunts Cartoonist's Pen

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A civil servant whose hard-hitting political cartoons appear in the Times and other B.C. newspapers has been told by the provincial government to stop his free-lance drawing.

Bob Bierman, a technical assistant with the environment ministry, said today he was told Jan. 17 by Deputy Minister Ben Marr to quit "moonlighting."

He said he was called into Marr's office and told a section of the Public Service Act prohibits any public service employee from engaging in any other remunerative work.

Bierman's caustic cartooning also appears occasionally in the Vancouver Sun and the bi-monthly B.C. Today.

Bierman said while he has no concrete evidence the government is singling him out because of his cartooning, the fact he was called on the carpet by the deputy minister's office indicates his case is being handled differently.

"That was the first indicator they were concerned with more than just the concept of moonlighting," Bierman said.

He estimates that there are about 2,000 other public service employees in Victoria who work at outside jobs.

"Unless an effort is made to get after all the free-lancers . . . then I would have to think that I am being singled out."

Bierman said he has written the Public Service Commission seeking approval for his free-lance cartooning which he has been doing during the three years he has worked for the government.

If the commission rejects his request, he will then make a decision on whether to quit his full-time job, drop his free-lance work or continue doing both and see what happens.

He said his immediate supervisor, Art Benson, director of the research analysis branch of the environment ministry, supports him in his effort to continue cartooning.

He said Benson sent a letter to the commission, stating his

20 Missing After Fire

BRECKENRIDGE, Minn. (AP) — About 20 persons were unaccounted for today after a pre-dawn fire swept through a three-storey hotel in temperatures that plunged to —30 degrees C.

Three hours after the blaze began in the Stratford Hotel, firemen reported that only one person was known to have escaped. Authorities said none of the other occupants had called in to report they were safe.

GIRLS TRY POISON ON SCHOOLMASTER

CHESTERFIELD, England (UPI) — Three 15-year-old schoolgirls attempted to poison their school principal after he disciplined them, juvenile court was told Thursday.

The girls, whose names were withheld for publication, poured diluted silver nitrate, "a noxious substance," into the cream jug on his tea tray.

According to prosecutor John Hamlin, one of the girls said of headmaster John Dodds, "I hated him. He is mean and horrible. I did not care what happened."

Dodds had disciplined the girls for being late to class and for taking a forbidden route into the school grounds.

The court dismissed the poisoning charges on technical grounds although it found two of the girls guilty of stealing the silver nitrate from the school science laboratory.

They were placed under supervision of a probation officer for two years.

B.C. Stops Hydro Exports

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro announced Thursday that it has cut off exports of all excess power.

Hydro spokesman John Sexton said the cutoff would last at least until the first week in February, when the provincial water branch publishes its reading of snow pack measurement in B.C.

He said that power production depends on the amount of water behind Hydro's dams and unless the Crown corporation is confident there is sufficient replenishment from the snow watersheds, the water will be saved for B.C. use.

Hydro has been sending up to 2,000 megawatt hours of power a day to Washington state this month, said Sexton, but now no surplus power will be routed to the Pacific northwest.

Jack Davis, provincial transport and energy minister, had said Jan. 17 that Hydro was prepared to sell excess electricity to northwest United States power companies.

He added, however, that the corporation wouldn't be making any sales immediately, and he didn't know if any excess was available.

He made the comment after Don Hodel, of the Bonneville Power Administration, said that power cutbacks to industry were planned because of the lack of rain for hydro-electric generators.

Sexton said Thursday that part of the Washington power problems are caused by uncompleted power projects. Power deficits for the next five years in the state were predicted as much as 12 months ago.

"We don't face the same situation at the moment," said Sexton. "However, we won't really know what the outlook is in B.C. until we get readings of snow packs related to major reservoirs at the beginning of February."

WEEKEND SKI REPORT

Mt. Baker and Mt. Seymour continue to provide the only means of alpine skiing within range of a weekend trip from Vancouver Island.

But even at these two places, conditions are far from excellent.

Clear conditions prevailed at Mt. Baker today with the temperature hovering at —2 degrees and no new snow atop a 51-centimetre total. Only two chairs and two rope tows are in operation from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each weekend.

Mt. Seymour reports good visibility, —3 degrees and no new snow. The Goldie rope tow will operate daily from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

work as a draftsman with the ministry is excellent and there is no conflict with his work.

Benson said there is "no way" Bierman is privy to any sensitive information and his work only pokes fun at subjects which are already public knowledge.

Benson said current cartoons are directed at the present Social Credit administration just as they were focused on the NDP when that party formed the government.

"He is equally irreverent to all political parties," Benson said.

The pertinent section of the Public Service Act states: "No employee shall engage in remunerative employment with any other employer or carry on any business, except with the approval of the commission."

Bierman said he would be interested in the government's reaction if he continues his cartoons but does not accept money for them.

He said he knows of other public service employees who have hobby farms from which they make money and others who dabble in real estate.

Mayor Faces Garnishee

SURREY (CP) — A garnishee order was served Wednesday against Surrey Mayor Ed McKitka by lawyers for two Surrey men who recently won awards of $7,500 each in a libel action against McKitka and radio hotline host Ed Murphy.

Gordon MacKinnon, lawyer for Herbert Lowell Fritz, a professional engineer, and his son, Daniel Lowell Fritz, a real estate developer, said the order served on the Surrey municipal payroll clerk attaches 30 per cent of McKitka's mayoral salary of $23,760.

PRICE JUMP FOR FRUIT, VEGETABLES

week. Local carrots have been selling for the past two or three months at 23 cents a pound but a three-pound bag of Alberta carrots is selling for 89 cents.

A Safeway spokesman said California green cabbage has gone to 33 cents a pound this week, compared with 28 cents last week. Celery has risen to 37 cents a pound from 35 and carrots are up from two pounds for 57 cents to 33 cents a pound.

Gerry Sharples, manager of Slade and Stewart wholesalers in Victoria, said the food industry has been most shocked by the jump in cabbage prices.

The reason for that is local supply just ran out about a week ago and wholesalers were forced to buy the California variety just as the price was nearly at its highest.

Vancouver and B.C. Interior wholesalers had run out of their local supplies some time ago and so have been paying the inflated prices for a while, he added.

He said there has been a lack of rain in the growing areas around Los Angeles and this has resulted in a drop in the supply of items like cabbage and celery.

However, he said, the weather appears to have improved and this should be reflected in lower prices to the consumer within the next week.

He said the California suppliers are giving preferential treatment to their western customers but are still faced with a strong demand for eastern buyers.

Both Sharples and the Safeway spokesman said there is a good supply of grapefruit and oranges so any increase in the price of these products has been slight.

Florida has imposed an embargo on citrus fruit moving out of the state pending an assessment of the damage done by the unreasonable weather conditions. The embargo is scheduled to be lifted next Thursday and this should further add to the supply.

"There is still plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables," said Sharples, "and fruit is still the best buy for Mrs. Consumer."

Bill Bowles, produce warehouse manager for Macdonald's Consolidated which supplies Safeway and other Victoria stores, is not quite as optimistic about the price of citrus fruits.

He said Macdonald's is now paying more than $4 for a crate of 48 grapefruit compared with a price of $2.25 paid before the freeze-up in Florida.

Oranges have gone up as well from $2.25 a crate to $4.75, he said, and this is bound to be reflected in the price to the consumer.

However, he said once things settle down and "the panic is over" prices are likely to moderate.

'10-4, Good Buddy' Tipoff On Case of Talking Toaster

TORONTO (CP) — Trevor Shogilev, an inspector from the Toronto office of the federal department of communications, was sent to an apartment recently to investigate a woman's complaint that her toaster was talking to her.

The toaster talked to Shogilev, too.

"The voice sounded tinny, and when I heard it say '10-4, good buddy' I knew what the problem was," Shogilev said.

"I had noticed a long CB antenna on the balcony off the next apartment."

Shogilev and his colleagues are getting accustomed to unusual complaints. They have come with the increasing popularlity of citizen-band (CB) radio and the attendant problem of interference.

Anything with an amplifier — including television sets, stereo sets, radios, tape recorders and telephones — can pick up CB signals.

Sometimes CB radio waves encounter more unusual receivers — toasters, stoves, public address systems, or audio equipment that has been switched off.

"If two wires are the right length in a stove or toaster they pick up enough of the energy transmitted from the CB to give an audio effect," said John Nosottti, supervisor of enforcement for the Toronto communications department.

the weather

With a high pressure area covering most of the province fog and stratus remain extensive on the South Coast. Meanwhile clouds continue to affect the southern Interior and snowflurries are expected along the Rockies. The best areas in B.C. are the central Interior, the west coast of Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland, where sunny weather will continue to dominate. In the meantime, a weak frontal system will bring more clouds and some precipitations to the North Coast for next few days.

Employers Seek Hard Line On Strikers, Pickets

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Employers Council of British Columbia Thursday released a controversial brief on proposed provincial Labor Code amendments and conceded it was wrong to withhold it after presenting it to Labor Minister Allan Williams.

The release came after the B.C. Federation of Labor said the council took an anti-union stand in its secret representation to Mr. Williams (Union Brief, see Page 20.)

The brief "clearly puts the lie to the oft-stated claim that they are not anti-union," said Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the federation.

He said the federation will prepare a detailed rebuttal to the document at a Feb. 9 meeting.

Key recommendations in the brief included:

—Changing the Labor Code definition of strike to encompass work slowdowns "or other concerted activity" by employees aimed at restricting output, in addition to actual work stoppages;

—Inclusion of a provision in the code that would prevent unions from threatening unlawful strikes and management from threatening unlawful lockouts;

—Elimination of code provisions that currently permit unions to picket allies of struck companies;

—The employer should have the right to bring management's side of the story before employees during a union organizing drive provided this does not involve "coercion, intimidation, threats, promises or undue influence."

—Elimination of a Labor Code section that forces employers to provide a list of employees and their addresses to a union for organizing purposes because it is "a gross invasion of the rights of privacy of those employees;

—Prohibition of strikes by unions over safety and health conditions;

—Exclusion from union membership any employee who works in a supervisory role or gives orders to other people.

In his letter accompanying the brief, council president William Hamilton says employers "have become increasingly concerned over interpretations of the current code" by the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

"We note the many instances of strikes and picketing in the province; these are especially disconcerting when, as is increasingly the case, they occur with board sanction during the term of valid binding agreements," Hamilton told the minister.

He also questioned the LRB's ability to enforce its own decisions.

"A major question now exists regarding the real ability of the board to apply effective sanctions if its authority is defied."

NEW MURDER TRIAL ORDERED FOR BOYLE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Pennsylvania Supreme Court today ordered a new trial for W. A. Tony Boyle, the former United Mine Workers president convicted of murdering UMW insurgent Joseph Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

The court also "reversed" Boyle's prison sentence of three life terms. It was not known whether this would result in freeing him.

Boyle, 74, has been in prison hospital ward in Western Penitentiary at Pittsburgh. Doctors say he has a heart ailment that causes chest pains.

Authorities said he tried to commit suicide with an overdose of sleeping pills in 1973, shortly before his conviction.

In granting a new trial, the high court said the trial court had convicted Boyle improperly in April, 1974, by refusing to admit testimony offered by Thomas Kane, an auditor for the federal government.

Magnificat Obsession

ANDOVER, England (Reuter) — A church organist told Thursday how he tussled with the vicar in the organ loft as the startled choir and congregation sang the Magnificat. The row, over whether accompaniment should be by piano or organ, ended with the two men playing both piano and organ in an angry duet. Lloyd Ponting, organist at St. Mary's church here for 37 years, said the vicar had instructed him to accompany Sunday Evensong on the piano but he did so on the organ. "After two verses the vicar appeared in the loft and snatched my music," he said. "I attemted to retrieve it and there was a bit of a tussle." Ponting said he would complain to the local church council about the affair. The vicar, Rev. Peter Chandler, refused to comment.

Suicide Only Escape From Solitary—Inmate

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Suicide is the only escape from the solitary confinement unit at the British Columbia penitentiary, a B.C. supreme court jury was told Thursday.

"There's no other way out except by killing yourself," testified Dwight Lucas, one of three prisoners charged with a June, 1975, hostage-taking.

Lucas, Andy Bruce and Claire Wilson each are charged with unlawful confinement and attempting to extort transportation. Classification officer Mary Steinhauser was fatally shot when guards stormed a storage area to free 14 other hostages after they had been held for 41 hours.

"I think I'm crazy now," Lucas testified of his time in solitary.

"I don't feel nothing for nobody. They locked me up, played games with me. You have to turn crazy. I'm not like (Tom) McCauley (another prisoner in solitary) but I am disturbed.

"I'm not afraid to do things now. I used to think things over. But now I have no fear of being punished. Nothing."

Lucas said he gave the hostages "a crash course in solitary confinement unit."

"We had to show them how others felt. We had to show them that we were human beings too."

"McCauley would scream and pound his head or hands on the walls. He was two cells away. He was crazy, completely gone.

"After being released (from solitary) I never wanted to go back. I was pretty rough. I thought I might end up like McCauley or something like that. They (guards) hit Tommy on the head with their handcuffs one day.

"They (guards) would do things just to aggravate us," said Lucas.

"They wanted us to react so they could gas us.

"I saw tear gas used once when Donald Oag began beating on his door and screaming to get something. They came and maced him through the window in the door.

"At feeding time we had to go down to the end of the tier for our trays," said Lucas. "The trays were already made out and we had to take them back to the cell.

"We'd find things in the food. Like cigarette butts, ashes, human waste."

The trial continues.

Depressed Chico Tries Suicide

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Comedian Freddie Prinze drew a pistol and fired a bullet into his head early today before the horrified eyes of his business manager who had tried to talk him out of his despondency over a recent divorce.

Prinze, 22-year-old star of television's Chico and the Man is in critical condition at UCLA hospital where neurosurgeons are working to save his life from a "through-and-through" wound.

Authorities said the slug entered his left temple and went out the other side of his head. Doctors withheld a decision on immediate surgery.

Manager Marvin Snyder said, "I did not see the gun until it was too late."

Paramedic Tom Gilmartin told UPI, "we found Prinze in the living room with a gun across his lap. The wound was what we call a through-and-through. It entered one side of his head and went out the other."

Friends said Prinze was despondent over a divorce last month from his wife of 15 months, Kathy Elaine. They have a son, Freddie, 10 months.

Prinze was also in despair over a court appearance next month on a misdemeanor charge of driving under the influence of drugs. He was arrested Nov. 5 for driving erratically on a freeway. Tests showed his blood contained a tranquilizer.

Lt. Dan Cooke said Prinze put the gun to his head shortly before 4 a.m.

A note was found in his expensive Wilshire boulevard apartment near Beverly Hills. It read: "I can't take it any longer."

Officers said the young comedian had telephoned his parents and estranged wife shortly before the shooting to tell them he was going to take his own life.

Earlier in the evening he was visited by his personal secretary, Carol Novak, his television producer, James Komack and his psychiatrist.

A spokesman for Prinze said he had been calling friends all night in an effort to relieve his despondency.

Only manager Snyder remained in the plush apartment when Prinze drew a medium calibre handgun from beneath some pillows on his living room couch, placed the gun to his temple and pulled the trigger.

Police said Prinze apparently had fired a "test shot" earlier in the day which passed through a wall and a medicine cabinet.

The 6-foot-2 performer first gained fame as a stand-up comedian on Johnny Carson's Tonight Show which led to his starring role in Chico three years ago. In addition to the series Prinze played club dates and cut a comedy album titled with his personal catch-phrase, Looking Good.

Succession Duties

It isn't often that a provincial budget contains such neat symbolic symmetry as the one brought down Monday by B.C. Finance Minister Evan Wolfe.

Abolition of succession duties and gift taxes for the mighty, universal pharmacare for the masses. One is the sugar syrup that makes the other go down smoothly.

The bad taste remains, however one chooses to digest the news. On average, succession duties and gift taxes bring in $25.5 million a year, just balancing expenditures on pharmacare. How does the government justify giving away this small but steady source of income in a time of restraint, restraint and more restraint?

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said abolition of succession duties will encourage investment in B.C. and declared that many family farms and businesses have had to be sold—often to foreigners — to pay the succession duties on a deceased's estate.

But this is only conjecture. Wolfe admitted that the government has no idea how much more investment will come to B.C. as a result, in fact, didn't even study the question or try to come up with an estimate.

There is a much stronger argument to be made for retention of succession duties. Bill Stow, the former finance department official demoted last year for blabbing about the real size of the NDP deficit, resigned and now is publishing his own quarterly analysis of public affairs in B.C. The first issue contains a very interesting article on succession duties.

Do succession duties discourage the establishment of new businesses, the investment of capital in the province?

"This argument is not supported on the basis of any research done in Canada or the U.S. Moreover, since corporations do not pay succession duties and since their shareholders do not necessarily live in B.C., common sense would suggest that corporate decision-making is not affected by this tax."

Succession duties cause people to leave B.C.? Again, there "is simply no evidence to support this contention." As Stow points out, merely for the owner of the assets to leave B.C. would not avoid succession duties, since the beneficiaries would have to leave as well.

They cause the forced sale of small businesses and farms? "There is virtually no evidence of this being a problem in B.C. on the basis of estates assessed in 1975." Hardly surprising, says Stow, since most businesses carry insurance to cover succession duties and farms not incorporated as limited companies are treated as residences and as such are exempt from duties. There is also provision for businesses to spread out duties over 10 years.

Stow enumerates a few of the facts about succession duties, which cut through the emotion Wolfe says surrounds the question.

In 1975 of 13,300 estates assessed only 1,906 were liable for duty. Almost one-third of the $28 million duty levied that year came from just 22 estates. Nearly 96 per cent of the 12,000 estates where the beneficiaries were "direct line," meaning immediate family, no duty was levied.

So abolition of succession duties clearly is a reform that helps only a few, a very small rich minority that is best equipped to pay taxes. The Social Credit government is not a disinterested bystander in this matter, either, since probably a third of the government MLAs (half of the cabinet) are millionaires or close to it.

So restrain yourselves, work harder, demand less and produce more and you too someday may be able to benefit by the abolition of succession duties.

Well Done, Sooke

Sooke citizens can be proud of local groups who constructed a dam that will help salmon fry on a small creek survive the summer, and eventually increase the coho-run on the Sooke River. Through the co-operation and determination of many groups, more than 150 people volunteered their time and labor to the project.

They had $10,000 from the province and LIP funds helped, but without Sooke's strong community spirit the idea might never have gotten past the talking stage. Jack Brooks, a former fisheries officer, deserves credit for refusing to let the idea die.

Sooke sets an example for us inhabitants of big, impersonal municipalities where few people know the guy down the block, let alone think about getting together in this type of volunteer co-operative endeavor. Well done, Sooke.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Can He Capture Old Magic?

The spectacle of President Jimmy Carter's inauguration last week was rather different from that of 1801 when Thomas Jefferson attired in "plain clothes" tied his horse to a convenient fence post and walked to the Capitol. But if Carter is not yet a giant of history like his predecessor, and many things have changed since Jefferson's time, the old magic, the grand idea and the high hopes of a new presidency remain, at least for most Americans. And for the outside world the presidency is more important than ever.

Of course, the hopes surrounding Carter are wildly excessive for a multitude of reasons beyond his control. So they must be when the problem now facing Jefferson's contemporary heir transcend the vivid imagination of the master and make his democratic axioms look oddly simple, even naive, in this age of scepticism. The wonder is that any man, especially a man of humble Christian faith like Carter, should seek the world's most powerful office, the impossible job, the agonies of decision, the loneliness and, still worse, the certainty that he can never do what he plans and promises to do. As his successors found, he must frequently do the opposite.

Promises

The mixed and contradictory motives of human ambition are always inscrutable. The greater the man the more mysterious his company of angels and demons. But the American people's assurance of a new beginning and a bold advance on every inauguration day somehow survives all the earlier disenchantments.

Roosevelt's New Deal, Truman's Fair Deal, Kennedy's New Frontier, Johnson's Great Society, Nixon's Law and Order were only slick phrases and labels plucked from the air, or some ghost writer's note book, and no one knew what they really meant when uttered.

Nevertheless, they were proper baggage for the journey ahead because they invoked an intangible but necessary thing with no literal definition in language. For lack of a better word, we call it leadership — a subtle union of leader and led that Canadians, even more than their neighbors, are demanding and not getting at the moment.

As well as it can be described in words, the highest task of the presidency is not so much to propose specific policies, laws and budgets, however important they may be, as to create a mood, an atmosphere, a public trust, a sense of forward movement. If a people lack that sense which Canadians now lack they will not make any governing system work.

Can Carter, unlike his Canadian contemporaries, generate that feeling? All of us should pray that he can, since more hangs on his success or failure than we, or even the Americans, yet realize. An improbable, little known man, a naval officer, physicist and peanut farmer has been given authority such as Jefferson did not seek or want, more authority indeed than the makers of the constitution expected or intended and much more than our parliamentary system would entrust to any single man.

The modern presidency penetrates every segment of the domestic economy, touches the life of every American household and reaches to the uttermost ends of the earth, including the communist states. Hence the vital, unanswered question is how the new president will use those powers, written and unwritten.

His answer must depend upon another question at once simpler and less understandable. What kind of man have his people actually chosen to lead them in the years of recurring crisis? They cannot know for some time, despite the vague, lofty aspirations of his inaugural speech. He himself cannot know, either, until the big decisions confront him, the buck stops on his desk and soft rhetoric is replaced by hard, lonely acts.

Meanwhile it is to be hoped that Carter, and everybody else, has read an extraordinary book on the secret strategy of the Second World War. Bodyguard of Lies, a title derived from Churchill's famous remark to Stalin, is relevant today because it exposes the true qualities of the free peoples when they are up against the ultimate crunch.

In wartime their resources of invention, deception and sheer genius, before they had built enough physical resources, outmatches those of their apparently more skilful enemy. Why, we must ask ourselves, as Carter is surely asking himself, is it that the same free peoples, matchless in war, cannot seem to make anything work satisfactorily in peace?

Pity Planet

The easy explanation is that in war everyone agrees on a few obvious imperatives and obeys them. Unfortunately no such common will exist now. But there is more to our current muddle than that. All free peoples, notably Canadians, have long been deceived by their usually sincere leaders and have voluntarily deceived themselves. Democracy may not be surrounded by a bodyguard of lies but assuredly it is distracted by a bodyguard of curious illusions.

The greatest of all illusions and the most difficult problem confronting Carter is that the standard of living of his people, and every people, can keep increasing steadily, without limit, while those of the poor peoples decline. And finally, unlike any predecessor, Carter approaches the haunting, almost unmentionable question whether any people are still capable of governing a free but dangerously brittle society on a pitiable planet writhing under mankind's torture.

Independence

A few days ago some Victorians were invited to hear a speech by an Edmonton gentleman, Mr. Mel Hurtig, a member of some group called a Committee for an Independent Canada.

Frankly, I am puzzled, baffled and bewildered by the title.

As far as I know, and with the exception of two islands, St. Pierre and Miquelon, which are under direct French rule, we are an independent nation, we have our own government based on a federal system, our own laws, our own flag and so on.

If by independence the above committee means economic self-sufficiency, then this strange outfit better realize that there is no country in the world which is entirely self-sufficient. Even the so-called "giants" e.g. the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. depend on others for supply of energy, wheat and various commodities.

If by independence is meant cultural isolation e.g. close our doors to art, literature, music, drama, etc. not "made in Canada" that would be the equivalent of spiritual starvation, by limiting our horizons instead of widening them. We are not less "patriotic" when we admire a sculpture from Italy, when we watch a television program from the U.S., when we read a magazine published in Great Britain.

Excellence in the field of culture, as in many others, is achieved only through fair and open competition. In the end, the best minds as well as the best products are the winners! — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dalls Road.

Unfair

In reference to the landlord cartoon of Jan. 20, you may consider this letter just so much dribble and discard same, but I will endeavor to stress a point that consider bad taste when it comes to pinpointing signs of the zodiac which consists of 12 different parts.

I understand the humor the cartoon was trying to convey but grouping the Capricorns and Aquarians as being not acceptable for rental establishments went a step too far. You see, the hardest working class are the Capricorns and the conscientious and trustworthy class are the Aquarians, and anyone having one as a mate or business partner is privileged. If you care to learn the other good qualities of the remaining 10 signs I would be pleased to relate them. — An Aquarian.

Foghorn Replies

Since the controversy began last year concerning the operation at the Foghorn at the James Bay Inn, we as owners have refrained from making unsolicited public comments. However, some statements made at last Tuesday's city council caucus meeting deserve some praise and some criticism.

First, we would like to thank Alderman John Hayes for taking the time to observe our operations and reporting his findings to council. We were unaware of his presence and are pleased that his observations support exactly what we have maintained, i.e.: that much of the noise throughout the neighborhood has nothing to do with the James Bay Inn, and that, in fact, most patrons leave the hotel in an orderly manner.

The criticism goes to Alderman Murray Glazier who in reply to Alderman Hayes' statement that the night he went to the area, found no apparent problems due to noise or disturbance, retorted "naturally it (the noise) would be held down" in view of council's known concerns. For Alderman Glazier's information, we have been and are trying to keep the noise down so we can get along with our neighbors. We find it difficult to understand Alderman Glaziers logic, first he states publicly that the hotel's management has done nothing to deal with the problem (which is untrue), then states that the noise is being "held down." Surely this means we are making progress in dealing with any noise problem associated with the "Foghorn."

We wish to assure council that we will continue to take action in attempting to control patrons leaving the "Foghorn." We also feel that before council threatens our livelihood, a more thorough investigation should be made. Alderman Hayes found time to take a first hand look and made his own conclusions.—Bill Wellburn, John Perri, 270 Government Street.

Psychic Ripoffs

It has come to the attention of the Vancouver Island Society for Psychical Research that there has been an upsurge of psychic rip-offs. By this I mean mediums of various kinds, fortune tellers, teacups, tarot cards, plain cards, sand reading, etc. These people advertise in papers, particularly the small sensational one bought at newstands and drug stores, magazines, any and all mediums that will accept such advertisements. From these ads they collect clients by the score, and collect, in some cases, more money in a year than the most frenetic religious cult.

The latest gimmick seems to be to write back to the potential victim and ask him or her to phone back, then the fun begins. One is told a good deal about ones past and present life and for x-number of dollars one's future problems will be solved. The victim seldom realizes that he or she has answered leading questions, and in any case an accent can betray a great deal.

We feel it incumbent upon us to at least lay out certain safeguards to those who will go to these people. This is not to say there are not many perfectly genuine psychics in this world. Even the phoneys often have a certain amount of ability, but research has revealed that the more money hungry they become the more ability they lose.

Now the rules.

Never phone the psychic yourself. Get a neighbor, and if in another country, a native of that place. Give no background at all — do not say you are travelling, etc. Just get an appointment. Dress as plainly and inexpensively as possible without being downright shabby. Remove all rings and watches, etc., and if going to a psychomatrist put the object to be read in a plain envelope and seal it.

Answer no leading questions, speak as little as possible. If you must answer, grunt, nod or smile. If you are going to a medium take a friend who should ask if he or she may examine the place for hidden wires, mikes, recorders, light switches that can be manupulated from a distance. Check all pictures, lamp bases, and unscrew the light bulbs and check the sockets. If the medium will not allow this, run, do not walk, to the nearest exit. Remember, the higher the fee, the more likely the funny business. In the case of the card readers and the Psychomatrists, remember the cardinal rule — the tongue in the teeth and the hands out of sight — hand motions reveal a good deal.

You men, don't sit back smugly and think this only applys to women. Fully half of the victims are men. Grief, worry, loneliness, desperation — these are the meat on which these people feed, and it can happen to any and all of us. Incinentally, writing to a "psychic" can be tricky, handwriting reveals a good deal more than you may think.

Phone us if you want any more advice (we are in the black pages under Psychical Society of Vancouver Island) but don't expect us to recommend a psychic. We have not had the opportunity to research anyone in this area, and so are not allowed to give a recommendation. Any psychic wishing to participate in such an experiment would be more than welcome, it takes at least a year of constant work. — Dorothy Wilson, Editor for the Vancouver Island Society for Psychical Research.

Matured?

As anticipated, the Socred cabinet of millionaires brought down a budget which calls for restraints from all except the wealthy.

Succession and gift taxes are abolished and consequently some $25.5 million, which these taxes contributed to the treasury, will have to be found from the not so wealthy.

Not a word about a super-tax for those with incomes of $25,000 and over.

Mining companies will be permitted to write off their exploration expenses against their taxes. As royalties were abolished and taxes were based on 17 per cent profits of course the loopholes for the companies have been increased and the public purse will suffer. The resources which the mining companies exploit are non-renewable and are the heritage of the people of the province.

No increase in the royalty on coal which stands at $1.50 per ton and was due to be increased by the late government to $2.50 on the April 1 1976. The Conservative government of Alberta charges up to $9 per ton royalty on its coal.

The minister of finance was somewhat confused when he was questioned by Dr. Helliwell (an economist) on television, and well he may be. However, I do congratulate him on not taking a swipe at some friendly commonwealth governments as he did in the last budget. Apparently he has matured somewhat since 1976.—M.P.B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

Botched Job

To the bureaucrats in the parliament buildings congratulations on a well botched job in your first year off office. Everything you have touched has risen sky high, contrary to your election promises. The Bennetts, McGeer, Wolfe, Curtis, Vander Zalm and, in fact, all your cabinet are a bunch of snobs who have forgotten the ordinary people. Costs have risen disgracefully and are still going up. Bonner has now gone out of his mind with his hydro rates. Just your increases in costs are scandalous and every day the paper keeps telling of more raises to come. Now this may be okay for your millionaire bureaucrats who get around $4,500 a year raise. But what of the ordinary Joe and especially the pensioner? He gets eight per cent on his lousy pension. Thank God we have a good man and his staff to keep us informed of the mess this outfit keeps leading into. As for Davis, he should take a long trip in a Libya oil tanker and take his millionaire friends, and don't forget Grace. Of all people who talks through her hat, she takes the cake. She should go back to her flower shop. — A Reader.

Budget Cuts

Every citizen would do well to look carefully at those in our society affected most by the recent budget cuts in the department of human resources, namely, the emotionally disturbed, the retarded, those in need of counselling, the aged in rest homes, the handicapped, children in day care centres.

When contrasted with the elimination of the succession duties which has been done for those with an over-accumulation of wealth, I think it can be fairly stated that no administration in recent years has shown such contempt for the helpless, the disadvantaged, the voiceless in our society and ensured success to the strong while condemning the weak and helpless to defeat. — Disillusioned.

Abortion

Elizebeth Forbes' column on Laura Sabia (Times, Jan. 24) proved indeed illuminating to at least one male reader, namely myself.

May I point out one error, however? In referring to "Safe, do-it-yourself abortions" Miss Forbes evidently forgets that no abortion can accurately be called "safe": not, at least, for the unborn human involved — after an often very painful last agony, she or he almost inevitably ends up dead. — Robin Terry, 524 Dallas Road.

How 7 Sisters Get Their Way

By BERNARD NOSSITER

(A review in the Washington Post of the book, The Control of Oil, by John M. Blair)

OPEC, of course, is not a cartel. It can't carve up output among its member countries — often split among themselves — and thus is impotent to fix the over-all level of oil supply. These homely chores are performed for OPEC by the real cartel, the incestuous Seven Sisters, five U.S., one British and one Dutch-British global firms. They determine whether the oil tap is opened or closed, country by country, and thereby validate OPEC's price pronouncements.

These elementary facts are well known in the trade, but have somehow escaped the attention of most western officials and popular newspapers. Even the recent and notorious price quarrel between the Saudis and other oil nations left popular commentators believing that the quarrel would be settled by governments rather than companies, the ultimate decision makers. It is one of the many merits of the late John Blair's indispensable study that the real relationships are made transparently clear.

ROCKEFELLER . . . he started it

With a demand more or less insensitive to changes in price, a calibrated control of supply is even more important. In oil, an abundant resource (global reserves are adequate for another century at least), this notion has long been recognized by the men who make fortunes in the sutff.

A century ago, John D. Rockefeller, confronted with undisciplined wildcatters, saw the point and played the game a little differently. He gobbled up first refining and then transport to seize a stranglehold on the flow of oil products to the market. His heirs and assigns simply moved control upstream when cheap Middle East oil began oozing out of the sands. Aided by some remarkable tax arrangements, they made the big profits — and carefully controlled the producing end of the business.

Until recently, the Seven Sisters enjoyed more or less complete control over the supply of foreign oil. Control over the domestic U.S. flow was assured by complaisant state and federal "regulatory" legislation, ostensibly aimed at conservation and really designed to prop the price.

The Sisters are Exxon, Mobil, Standard of California or SoCal, Gulf, Texaco, BP and Shell. Exxon and Mobil used to carry the name "Standard" in their title too — like SoCal, they derive from Rockefeller's original trust — but they changed their names to disguise their origins.

Intimate Links

Even today, as Blair relates in loving detail, combinations of the Seven are intimately linked as producer-buyers of most OPEC oil (ARAMCO, the Saudi "offtaker," is Exxon, Mobil, SoCal and Texaco, as joint operators of pipelines). They join hands to explore the North Sea in common consortia; they meet each other as directors of the same banks.

Two centuries ago Adam Smith told us what happens when nominally competing businessmen forgather. In some or all of these media, the oil managers settle how much can be "off taken" or produced to prop a predetermined price. Once upon a time, they wrote it all down on a piece of paper, the Achnacarry Agreement. Nowadays, that sort of behavior is frowned upon and besides, Blair observes, it is unnecessary.

OPEC has affected the style but not the substance of this happy game. Its first great contribution came from that radical Marxist, Colonel Qaddafi of Libya. As Blair recalls, some oil got away from the Seven in 1970 and was flowing to independent producers who sold to independent refiners who sold to independent filling stations and actually cut the price of gasoline. That had to stop. So Qaddafi, as interested as the Sisters in high prices, took over the independents and slashed more than one million barrels daily from his nation's output. That restored the oil price for the real cartel.

It was this action and not the non-existent Arab "boycott" (a temporary cut in Arab output in the fourth quarter of 1973 to balance the over-large production of the first nine months) that set the stage for what Blair calls the great "price explosion."

It would be wrong to suggest — and Blair does not — that OPEC is no more than a price-announcing combine. It is true that the announced price could not be sustained without the will and consent of the Sisters. But OPEC has transformed them, inciting a change in the locus of their profits.

The Sisters now own only some, not all, of the oil extracted in Opecia. Thus, they no longer have the same vested interest in maximizing profits on crude. So they used the price explosion as a mask to shift profits downstream, to make their big money at the refineries that cook the stuff into gasoline, home heating oil and fuel for electric utilities. John D., wherever he is, must be nodding sagely. One of Blair's many telling calculations makes the point: between 1972 and the end of 1974, crude oil went up 96 per cent but residual oil for utilities skyrocketed 224 per cent. In an elegant refinement, Blair discovers that the companies shrewdly shifted the bulk of the refinery increase to the customers who could best pass it on, the "regulated" electric utilities.

While they were at it, the tough new managers of the five U.S. Sisters and their larger domestic cousins raised their profit goals about 25 per cent. Their target rates of return on investment after taxes were lifted from about 12.5 to 16 per cent. The new breed of managers for the Rockefeller interests are clearly making their mark. (Ownership data unhappily has not been gathered since 1938 but unless the family was badly advised, there is no reason to think the Rockefellers and their trusts have lost working control of Exxon, Mobil, SoCal and the other chips off John D.'s Standard block).

There is no better guide to this piquant tale than John Blair. Author of the Federal Trade Commission's classic study of the oil cartel, he later served as chief economist for the Senate Anti-trust and Monopoly subcommittee.

Savage Despots

But where does this leave the rest of us? The Rockefellers and those with more modest holdings in the great oil concerns can view the prospect with equanimity. A string of savage oriental despots from Tripoli to Teheran can indulge their fantasies on an undreamed of scale. Purveyors of computerized engines of destruction have fallen into a lovely new market.

The Third World, of course, is bankrupt. It would be ironic if its bad debt brought down the mismanaged Chase Bank, chosen instrument of the Rockefellers and oil. The rich West has had to shake off a steeper inflation and deeper slump than it otherwise would have suffered.

Until the industry's heavy hand can be loosened from the huge resources of shale-producing oil, until cars are wrapped in fibreglass and powered with fuel cells, until new technology taps energy from wind, wave and sun, what is to be done?

SAUDI'S YAMANI . . . no monopoly, but . . .

Blair suggests two courses: one is to put the U.S. companies under utility-type regulation, diminishing at least in theory their appetite for ever-higher profit rates nourished by ever-higher product prices. But the history of regulation is not encouraging, least of all in oil. If the great majors can convert state departments under conservative presidents like Eisenhower and radicals like Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon into errand boys performing such parochial tasks as driving out independents and torpedoing anti-trust suits, what hope has an obscure regulatory commission?

A better answer, Blair thinks, is a renewed try with anti-trust. At the producing level, the majors would be found guilty of "conscious parallelism" and ordered to yield some of their oil to price-cutting independents. The big integrated concerns would be broken up, split into separate companies that produce oil, refine it, move it and market it. This time, Blair hopes we have learned from the 1911 suit that did not break up John D.'s empire. A new order would bar sizable shareholders in one disintegrated concern from receiving shares in another.

The long history of oil and anti-trust does not entitle Blair to optimism. The Senate, however, appears to have found a way around a reluctant executive, trust-busting by legislative fiat. This idea is so promising that it genuinely frightens the industry. Blair's book should powerfully concentrate the minds of legislators who are still dubious.

No Need to Sell

No need to sell Exxon shares at once, however. The great oil companies have more often used than been abused by legislators all over the globe. Their ability to buy or rent governments is matched only by the aerospace industry.

Thanks to Blair, however, no one can plead ignorance any longer. In rich detail, he has laid out with remarkable clarity what and how the Sisters and their Epigoni are doing to us all.

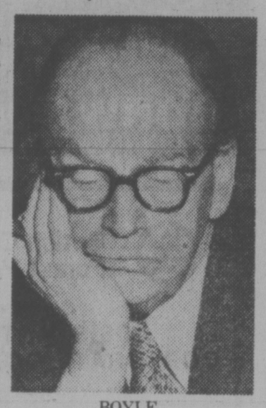
Getting a Grip on the Cable

By GEOFFREY STEVENS
The Globe and Mail

Canada has the most extensive cable television system in the world. The service is available to 70 per cent of Canadian homes and 45 per cent of all households subscribe to it. Between 1970 and 1975, gross fixed assets in the cable business rose from $131 million to $358 million and gross annual revenues from $55 million to $161 million, a much faster rate of growth than for the broadcasting industry as a whole. The size of the cable business, its rapid growth, the lure of quick, large profits and subscriber demands for ever more extensive service, have had the inevitable result of forcing out many small, local entrepreneurs and of increasing the concentration of cable licences in the hands of major operators. Some critics are concerned about what they regard as "trafficking" in broadcasting licences.

At a public hearing which opened in Vancouver Tuesday, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) is hearing a bid by one of the biggest operators, Maclean-Hunter Cable TV Ltd. (244,000 subscribers in Ontario), to take over Western Cablevision Ltd. and its subsidiary, M.S.A. Cablevision Ltd., which have 54,500 subscribers in Surrey and Clearbrook, B.C.

Maclean-Hunter Ltd., the parent company, owns (in addition to its print empire) radio and/or television outlets in Calgary, Kitchener-Waterloo, Chatam and Toronto. Through M-H Communications Ltd., it owns 61.7 per cent of Maclean-Hunter Cable TV which controls cable systems in 14 Ontario communities. The conglomerate's ancillary interests include cable systems in the United States, advertising agencies and 36.1 per cent of the Global television network. Acquisition of the two B.C. systems would give Maclean-Hunter its first cable operations in Canada outside of Ontario.



BOYLE
'continuing toll'

Although size alone has never particularly bothered the Commission, it does worry about the "undue" concentration of ownership. It also worries about community service. As CRTC Chairman Harry Boyle put it in a speech in Montreal last week: "Death, taxes, and the fear of succession duties take a continuing toll of individual ownership by people who live and work in the communities for which broadcast licences continue to be issued. Managers replace entrepreneurs and owners in a community."

Thus, the questions facing the CRTC in Vancouver this week include: How big is too big?; Is it a good idea to permit Maclean-Hunter to extend its cable operations out of Ontario?; Can a company based in Toronto be sufficiently responsive to local needs in B.C.?

There are other issues, as well, and a couple of them will be raised in an intervention by the Canadian Broadcasting League. One concerns the way the Commission approaches an application to transfer a licence from one group to another. If a broadcaster decides to sell out, an application is made to transfer the licence to a specified purchaser. The CRTC either approves or rejects the transaction. Although it has the power to do so, it does not call for competitive applications.

The broadcasting league argues that, whenever the CRTC receives an application to transfer a licence, it should call for other applications and award the licence to the group that would best serve the community concerned. Failure to do so, the CBL maintains, defeats the regulatory purpose by, in effect, permitting a broadcaster to select his own successor.

The second point stressed by the CBL is that the CRTC ought to concern itself about the price to be paid by the purchaser. The Commission works on a willing seller-willing buyer premise. It does not concern itself with the price, as long as it is satisfied that the purchaser has the financial resources to pay without bleeding the radio or television station or cable system to death. (In the case of Surrey-Clearbrook, the total price of $8.5-million may be excessive, but Maclean-Hunter can undoubtedly scrape up the money.)

The broadcasting league argues that, if the CRTC made sure that a realistic price (and no more) were paid for broadcasting operations, a new owner might be able to afford to improve service or (in the case of cable) to reduce the monthly charge to subscribers. Aside from a bit of hardware, the only real asset a cable operator has is his licence and whatever goodwill goes with it. "Who does the goodwill belong to?" asks Andrew Roman, a lawyer for the broadcasting league. "Does it belong to the company which holds the licence or does it belong to the public which granted the licence?"

A question worth asking — and answering.

Inspector Dupin was irritated. That afternoon he had spotted Jack the Ripper buying chestnuts in the Tuileries and had trailed him to his hotel, which turned out to be the Ritz. "Ah ha!" he had said to himself, "now I've got problems." (Mon Dieu! Voila la tristesse.")

He would have been reluctant to arrest anybody who was wanted for murder. Since the Abu Daoud affair, in which the police had arrested a man wanted for murder, thereby infuriating the government, arrests of people wanted for murder had become extremely tiresome. Now one had to get clearances from so many ministries. Was this arrest in the national interest? Could the police certify that it was diplomatically sound? Was this arrest; in fact, necessary?

Since the Ripper was the sort of man who could put up at the Ritz, Inspector Dupin realized that he was in an extremely delicate position. Certainly the ministry of tourism would be reluctant to approve seizing a man capable of bringing so much foreign currency into the economy.

Nor would the ministry of hotels be happy about publicity that one of France's flossiest establishments had played host to the infamous Ripper. And what if Jack turned out to have family connections to the British Peerage? With his Ritz address, it was entirely possible.

Arresting such a man for murder would infuriate the ministry of finance. It had been forced to lay out the cost of a first-class airline ticket to Algeria to make amends to the Arabs for the arrest of Abu Daoud. If the Ripper were related to an earl or a duke, the finance minister would probably have to buy him a ticket on a world cruise of the Q.E. 2 to smooth England's feathers.

With French logic, Dupin concluded that the only sensible course was to let the Ripper know he had been spotted and hope he would quietly flee the country.

And so Dupin trailed him next day to a restaurant and watched while Jack produced a set of surgical knives and began the degustation of a plate of snails. "That scalpel looks suspiciously like the weapon used in the Whitechapel case," Dupin hinted. ("Le scalpel me fait suspicioneer le Blanche-chapelois.")

"You must be a police officer," replied the Ripper. ("Un flic?")

"I'll state the questions," said Dupin, ("L'etat, c'est moi.")

The Ripper asked if he was under arrest.

"Don't be absurd," said the suddenly alarmed Dupin. ("N' absurdez-vous pas!") He simply wanted to do the Ripper a favor, he explained, producing a full set of international air-line, boat and train schedules.

Jack glanced at the schedules and became very cross. "Trying to railroad, airline or boat me out of the country, are you?" he cried. "The press shall hear of this." ("Toujours le journalisme!")

Dupin was frantic. If the Ripper's presence were reported in the papers, he pleaded, he would be forced to arrest him. There would be endless paperwork. The government would be furious.

Dupin was frantic. If the Ripper's presence were reported in the papers, he pleaded, he would be forced to arrest him. There would be endless paperwork. The government would be furious.

"That's your headache," said the Ripper. ("Quel dommage.") He pushed his chair back, stood and said, "Come on, Dupin, we're going down to headquarters."

"Impossible," cried Dupin.

"You're taking me in," said the Ripper.

At headquarters, Jack leaned on the interrogation truncheon buffing his nails while Chief Inspector Duval pleaded with him not to insist on having charges pressed against him.

"It's no good, Duval," said the Ripper. ("Ce n'est pas bon, mon cher.") "Justice must be done." ("Liberte, fraternite, egalite")

Duval turned on Dupin in a rage. "Your bumbling got us into this," he cried. "If the government hears we've arrested the Ripper without approval from the ministry of tourism, the ministry of hotels and the ministry of finance, it will be our heads." ("Adieu, mon tete.")

Dupin pleaded with the Ripper for mercy. ("Merci, bon Ripeur!")

That merciless heart warmed for an instant, and Jack agreed to relent. But only on one condition.

"Name it," chorused the policeman. "Comment vous appelez-voius")

The Ripper said they would have to pay his bill at the Ritz and finance a two-week vacation on the Riviera.

"You are too kind," cried a grateful Dupin. ("Vous etes ein Mensch.")

Cablesystems Unity

Benjamin Levinter, the founder of Unity Bank of Canada, and two other shareholders have obtained an interim injunction to prevent the bank from declaring forfeit or selling their party-paid shares.

T. L. Avison, Unity president, said Wednesday the three shareholders are "challenging the validity of our call under section 40 of the Bank Act." He refused to comment further.

Under the section, banks are required to make a call for payment on partly-paid shares if the bank's capital is reduced.

Unity, which has been operating at a loss, issued a call late last year for payment of $4.07 a share on partly-paid shares.

Levinter, his father, Isadore, a Toronto lawyer, and Ivan Thornley-Hall obtained the injunction.

At the end of last year, Benjamin Levinter held about 57,000 partly-paid shares, his father about 17,000 and Mr. Thornley-Hall about 2,300.

Westcoast

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. has converted its holding of 600,000 preferred shares of Westcoast Petroleum Ltd. into 1,200,000 common shares of that company, it was announced Tuesday.

E. C. Phillips, Westcoast Transmission president and chief executive officer, said in a news release that the conversion gives Westcoast Transmission a total of 3,217,500 common shares of Westcoast Petroleum. This represents approximately 61 per cent of existing outstanding common shares.

Weyerhaeuser

The Weyerhaeuser Co. has reported a 56 per cent increase in 1976 earnings over 1975, making 1976 the second best year in the company's history.

The best year was in 1973, the company said.

Earnings for common shares for 1976 were $2.32, including 65 cents a share earned in the fourth quarter, a record for the period.

Earnings after income taxes were $306 million on record sales of $2.87 billion. Last year earnings after taxes were $189 million on sales of $2.42 billion.

Sales for both the full year and the fourth quarter were up 18 per cent, the company said.

The rebound reflected strength in U.S. single-family housing construction, with accompanying strength in lumber, plywood and timber prices, and a rebound in the Japanese housing industry, officials said.

U.S. Steel

U.S. Steel, the largest steelmaker in the United States, reported lower profits for 1976 compared with 1975 as well as a decrease in earnings in the fourth quarter of last year.

In 1976, earnings were $410.3 million or $5.03 a share on sales of $8.7 billion. This compared with $559.6 million or $6.89 a share in 1975 on earnings of $8.5 billion.

The company pointed out that part of the decrease in 1976 was because 1975 net profits included $44.6 million or 55 cents a share from the sale of its excess timberland.

For the fourth quarter of 1976, the company reported $80.5 million or 98 cents a share in earnings on sales of $2.041 billion compared with $111.6 million or $1.37 a share in net profits on sales of $1.966 billion in 1975.

Kaiser

Kaiser Resources Ltd. reported consolidated net earnings for 1976 of $52,387,000 or $1.98 a share on sales of $262,890,000.

The results compare with 1975 consolidated earnings of $64,000,000 or $2.54 a share, before extraordinary income of $7,229,000 or 29 cents a share from tax losses carried forward, on sales of $259,870,000.

Edgar F. Kaiser Jr., president and chief executive officer, said in a news release that net earnings declined in 1976 primarily as a result of a higher effective tax rate and the absence of extraordinary income from tax losses carried forward. The higher effective tax rate resulted from substantially lower earned depletion benefits in 1976 and from increases in federal and provincial income tax rates.

Pre-tax earnings for 1976 increased by $1,662,000 over 1975 despite a lower level of shipments.

Consolidated net earnings in the fourth quarter of 1976 were $14,310,000 or 54 cents a share on sales of $71,911,000, compared with earnings of $17,289,000 or 67 cents a share on sales of $68,740,000 in the fourth quarter of 1975.

Kitimat Oil: Only U.S. Benefits

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Kitimat oil pipeline proposal was pictured Thursday as providing all the risks to British Columbia and all the benefits to the United States.

In a public airing of the proposal, Jack Cressey, manager of Kitimat Pipeline Ltd., and Dr. Douglas Gordon of the environmental consulting firm of F. F. Slaney Ltd., spoke to the B.C. chapter of the Canadian Society of Environmental Biologists.

In a three-hour meeting, they outlined the submission to be made to the National Energy Board of Canada later this year and the Slaney Report assessing "available data" on environmental impact should there be an oil spill from one of the supertankers that would carry Alaska crude to Kitimat.

Several key points emerged over using Kitimat as a major oil terminal.

—The Slaney Report's "general conclusion that the siting of the terminal at Kitimat would not have any signifcant long-term effects on the environment" is based on the "one prime guideline" question of: "Is there anything that could be irretrievably lost?"

—The pipeline company has made no provision to pay costs of compensation or cleanup in the event of a spill:

—The inside passage route for tankers from Alaska to Kitimat was not chosen because of environmental considerations but on the advice of tanker captains and B.C. pilots;

—The use of Kitimat to pipe oil to the U.S. Midwest would not eliminate tanker traffic to the B.C. south coast or Puget Sound;

—The pipeline would not supply oil to the Canadian market.

Gordon said that in preparing the environmental report they looked at the federal government's own study prior to allowing drilling in the Beaufort Sea. He said that study concluded that even if there were a "continous, uncontained blowout . . . although it (the ecology) would take decades to come back, there wouldn't be any irreversible effects."

Gordon said several times that his forecasts of the ability of various species of sea life to survive a major oil spill were "conclusions" not the result of any in-depth studies.

He said he had looked at the possibility of a disastrous spill that would "decimate" the five species of salmon in the area and that "taking into consideration the size of the area, the nature of the oil-how it behaves, decomposes — again, this is a conclusion, that with the known salmon enhancement methods and the funds that would become available, I'm sure there would be no irreversible damage."

"There's no question that tens of thousands of birds would be killed in a major oil spill but we couldn't find any indication that it would wipe out major species forever," said Gordon.

FOOD SERVICE OPERATORS are invited to attend
AN INFORMATIONAL BUSINESS BRIEFING TO LEARN OF OPPORTUNITIES TO LEASE FACILITIES IN THE B.C. BUILDING OFFICE AND COURT COMPLEX in downtown Vancouver

Facilities to be leased will include:
An international style Food Fair off Robson Street, and various restaurants.

These facilities are in the setting of a sunken plaza, skating rink and landscaped urban park, and are adjacent to government offices and Law Courts. The facilities are expected to be available beginning in the Spring of 1978.

Another food service required will be:
A mobile coffee service to centralized areas in the office building.

Exceptional opportunities exist for established food service operators.

The Briefing will be held at Hotel Vancouver on:
TUESDAY, February 15th, 1977
10:00 A.M. to 1:00 P.M.

Proposals for leasing space and for providing the services listed above will be entertained from prospective operators who attend this Briefing.

Information regarding the character of facilities in the B.C. Building Office and Law Courts Complex and the procedures for making proposals will be provided at the Briefing.

Please advise us at the following number or in writing to the following address if you intend to come to the Briefing.

Stealing Truck Earns 90 Days

Frank Edward Walters, 33, was sentenced in county court Thursday to 90 days in jail for stealing his former employer's truck and driving to Saskatchewan last fall.

Walters, also known as Edward Frank Watters, of 224 Island Highway, pleaded guilty before Judge Peter Millward to stealing a 1969 Ford half-ton pickup belonging to Dave Alder, of Salt Spring Auto Wreckers, Ganges.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett asked for a stay of proceedings on a charge of theft of more than $200 from Alder.

Birkett said Walters left Ganges the weekend of Sept. 10-13, taking the truck with Alder's consent to pick up some truck parts and tools in Vancouver, with the intention of returning on the Sunday to do a rush repair job.

When he failed to appear either Sunday or Monday, Alder phoned the person from whom Walters was to collect the parts and learned the accused had not been there. He reported the matter to RCMP when he found Walters' commonlaw wife and their belongings were gone from their trailer camp.

On Oct. 4 he received a call from a woman in Richmond, Sask., asking if he was missing a truck and that the accused had left her to take a job there. Police found the accused working at a garage with the truck parked outside.

Counsel Douglas Christie said Alder owed Walters money and therefore felt no urgency in explaining his absence, as he had previously been entrusted with the truck. This was less culpable than outright theft, he argued.

The lawyer noted Walters had spent three months in custody awaiting trial.

Birkett pointed out the accused spent only six weeks in custody before being granted bail, and that he had never asked Alder for the money owing him for work they had agreed to split 50-50.

Alder was under no compulsion to pay Walters until his customers paid him, Birkett said.

The Crown cited a lengthy history of convictions for theft, contributing to juvenile delinquency, dangerous driving, assault, false pretences, and fraud in all three western provinces, and said Walters was released from his last sentence in September, 1975.

Duncan Won't Make Grant To Bureau

DUNCAN — City council again has decided against making a grant to the Victoria-based Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau.

Mayor Ken Paskin said the city's assessment this year would have been $632.

"The general feeling of council has been that the bureau is oriented toward Victoria and the Cowichan Valley was not realizing much tourist business from this organization," the mayor said.

Every dollar raised by the bureau is matched by a $1.50 grant up to $74,000 from the provincial travel department.

Former Hoffa 'Foster Son' Gets Fine, Jail

DETROIT (AP) — Charles (Chuckie) O'Brien, the self-styled foster son of former Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa who figured in the federal investigation of Hoffa's disappearance, was sentenced Thursday to four months in prison and a $2,500 fine on a labor law violation. He was accused of accepting a free car from a Detroit auto dealership whose employees the Teamsters were trying to organize. O'Brien, a teamsters official, was free on $10,000 bond and will appeal.

A Position of Weakness, Says Trudeau

FIFTH COLUMN HIT

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque on Thursday accused a "fifth column of English-Canadian businessmen" of doing all in its power of create a negative climate toward Quebec in United States business circles.

Commenting on his visit to New York earlier this week, Levesque told a news conference that these businessmen, who are listened to in the United States, are opposed to any change in Quebec.

"They see Quebec as an inner colony of great raw resources and cheap labor . . . and have a basic hostility to any kind of change in Quebec."

The premier said a couple of hundred of the businessmen from Montreal and Toronto attended his speech Tuesday to the Economic Club of New York and "were strategically deployed at various tables."

Levesque also slipped in jabs at Prime Minister Trudeau, who began a three-day tour of the Quebec City area Thursday.

The prime minister is playing the role of Confederation's saviour when his real interest is to shore up his own sagging popularity, Levesque said.

By PETER HADEKEL
Times Quebec Bureau

QUEBEC CITY — Prime Minister Trudeau returned to Parti Quebecois country for the first time since the Nov. 15 election Thursday and told an audience of partisan supporters that an independent Quebec would have to negotiate with the rest of Canada from a position of real weakness.

In a low-key address to about 400 supporters in Langeiler riding, Trudeau said an independent Quebec would risk plunging itself into a worse "minority" position than separatists claim already exists.

"The federal government and the nine provinces would be very strong in any negotiations with Quebec over economic association," Trudeau said.

"It would be six million against 16 million." "We would say 'you broke up the country and now you're making demands'."

Similar sentiments were issued in an earlier speech by Senator Jean Marchand, who said Quebecers needed Confederation in order to survive, and that Trudeau was the man to insure that survival.

Also in the audience were Health Minister Marc Lalonde, who serves as the Liberals' Quebec lieutenant, and Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, who was recently appointed the federal Liberals' Quebec campaign manager.

Trudeau's speech was considered a kick-off to campaigning for five federal by-elections slated for Quebec this spring.

The by-elections are being labelled a "mini-referendum" by Liberal organizers who have seen their party's fortunes in Quebec slide in recent Gallup polls.

But surprisingly, Trudeau appeared to tone down the force of his message to the Liberal meeting, perhaps in anticipation of an important speech he is scheduled to deliver today to the Quebec chamber of commerce.

The audience, almost all of whom were over 40, interrupted his speech with applause only once.

The prime minister, however, did lash out at those who have called Quebec MPs "traitors" for going to Ottawa to serve their constituents.

He said his government's bilingualism record proves that it's possible to work outside Quebec for the interests of French Canadians.

"Those who deny that reality are insulting all Quebecers."

And he attacked Quebec separatists for "dismissing" the almost one million Francophones outside Quebec as a lost cause, arguing that "Canada was explored and colonized by French Canadians right across the country."

He said he hoped the Parti Quebecois would bring good government to the province and said he is ready to work with it to reduce unemployment and promote investment in Quebec.

Sask. Indian Children Taken Illegally

REGINA (CP) — The federal department of Indian affairs has been taking Indian children away from their parents in Saskatchewan illegally, J. D. Leask, director-general of the department for Saskatchewan, said today.

Leask was questioned about the department's practices following broadcast of a CBC public affairs program here Wednesday night, which said some 70 children had been taken from reserves in the North Battleford area by the department and the parents of the children had never been given a hearing to determine if they should get their children back.

The director-general confirmed that children had been removed by the department and that the department had no legal authority to apprehend them. The legal authority, he said, rests with the province.

Leask could not confirm the figure 70 in the North Battleford area but said throughout Saskatchewan there were something of the order of 700 children in the department's care, either in foster homes or some other form of accommodation. He said he did not know in how many cases the parents would have been afforded their right to a hearing.

Leask said the department only acts where it is convinced the child's life is in danger, either through patental neglect or abuse.

The true legal authority to apprehend children actually rests with the provincial department of social services, he said. But the province considers Indians a federal responsibility and does not wish to act.

Leask said generally, Indians themselves wish to have their services and affairs handled through the federal department.

Manitoba: No Place to Die

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg chartered accountant Thursday spoke on the "advantages of not dying in Manitoba" and blamed the province's succession duties for driving out people and their money.

John McFarland, speaking at a service club meeting, gave an "extreme" example of a man investing his $50,000 savings in 1972 in a manufacturing industry, then dying suddenly in 1984 without having arranged tax shelters for his estate.

McFarland said if the man's business had cash assets of $1 million, only $69,000 might be left for his son after taxes and professional fees compared with $555,000 in Alberta which has no succession duties.

He said he discourages people from investing in Manitoba.

Phone Rates Up

EDMONTON (CP) — Monthly telephone rates will increase 30 cents effective Feb. 1 for city residents, council decided Wednesday night.

Council gave first and second readings of a bylaw approving the rates Tuesday and had to approve third reading Wenesday after aldermen were told a technicality could delay the increase.

Residential rates will increase to $6 monthly from $5.70. Business rates will increase 80 cents to $17.60 from $16.80 when rates were last increased 20 per cent in 1976.

Regina VD Dips

REGINA (CP) — The number of reported cases of venereal disease in Regina has dropped sharply.

Dr. John Chiao, city medical health officer, said 652 cases were reported in 1976, a decline of about 25 per cent from the 1975 total of 869.

Dr. Chiao said the decline matches a provincial trend which saw 3,523 cases reported in 1976 compared with 3,854 from a year previous.

Mother Found

EDMONTON (CP) — The mother of two boys found abandoned in a West Edmonton home 18 months ago was located in the city Wednesday.

Ken Jones, supervisor of the provincial child protection registry, said the mother was found by child welfare workers but her name was being withheld pending further investigation.

The two boys, Christian, believed about 6, and his brother Timothy, believed about 18 months, have been living together in a foster home since they came to the attention of social workers in the summer of 1975.

A baby sitter had contacted social workers saying the mother, who used the name Louanne Belcourt, had failed to return and collect the children.

Lower Mortgages

EDMONTON (CP) — The government-owned Alberta Home Mortgage Corp. has reduced its mortgage interest rates by three-quarters of one per cent, Housing Minister Bill Yurko announced Wednesday.

The reduction applies to single-family units, while lesser reductions will apply to other lending programs.

Cocke: ICBC Aids Private Firm

Staggered renewal dates for Autoplan insurance policies is the first step toward allowing private insurance companies to compete on a full basis in B.C., NDP MLA Dennis Cocke said Thursday.

Cocke, former director of the Insurance Corporation of B.C., said in the legislature Education Minister Pat McGeer's announcement last wek that insurance renewal dates would expire according to the last digit in the car licence number as of 1978, is essential if the private companies are to return in a major way.

Private companies are geared to the staggered renewal system, and couldn't have changed over easily to the uniform renewal date of March 1 used previously by ICBC, he said.

Private companies are allowed to operate in B.C. but all drivers must buy their compulsory insurance from the government-owned corporation.

The companies care only to sell the non-compulsory, additional coverage.

Cocke noted that the Royal Insurance Co., "one of the biggest multi-national branches operating in this country," announced it would re-enter the auto insurance business shortly after the staggered renewal date announcement was made.

The Royal, Cocke said, is only coming in on a limited basis this year to "get its toe-hold and set up for the bonanza in 1978."

"I predict that there will be lots of other private firms racing back into B.C. in 1978 to get in on the gravy," he said.

Gibson Fails In Unity Debate Bid

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson failed Thursday to have the legislature adjourn for an emergency debate on national unity.

Gibson said that unless the government clarifies its position on what he consider separatist statements by Education Minister Pat McGeer, irremedial damage could be done to confederation.

Speaker Ed Smith quickly ruled Gibson out of order, saying that one of the conditions for emergency debate is that the issue must be raised at the earliest opportunity. Gibson should have raised it Wednesday afternoon or evening.

During last week's debate on the throne speech, McGeer offered his solution to federal-provincial relations, saying that all jurisdictions which could be agreed on by the provinces should rest with the federal government and that all areas of disagreement should rest with the province.

Gibson says McGeer's statements are tantamount to advocating the break-up of Canada because Quebec's monetary and foreign policy would never be accepted by the provinces.

"The government should have been forced to debate it, to either agree with it or repudiate it," Gibson said.

The only sentiment offered by either McGeer or Premier Bill Bennett on the issue, he said, is ambivalence.

Market Boards Reviewed

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt told the legislature Thursday his ministry is carrying out a full review of all marketing boards in B.C. this year.

Hewitt said the review will be held in conjunction with the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs and will analyze the effect the 12 boards have on consumers and producers.

The marketing boards coordinate pproduction and sales in the following product categories: broiler chicken, cranberry, egg, tree-fruit, grape, milk, mushroom, oyster, sheep and wool, turkey, coast vegetable and interior vegetable.

Hewitt said the review will determine whether or not the system is the best available, whether administration of the boards is adequate and whether the consumer receives any benefit.

WCB PROTESTER PARKS ON STEPS

A Langford man, claiming he can no longer get drugs for a 17-year-old knee injury, says he will sit on the legislature steps every day until he gets action from the Workers' Compensation Board.

Norman Ferguson, 52, of 848 Hockley Place, says he suffered a chipped knee cap in an accident in Holberg while working for Rayonier Canada in 1960.

Since then, he has had five operations including the removal of the knee cap, and has worked at several jobs.

But now the pain is so bad he can no longer work, and his doctor has cut him off the pain-killing drug Demerol, he said.

He says he wants the WCB to get after his doctors to do something about his condition so he can go back to work.

During his first vigil on the legislative steps Thursday, he talked with NDP leader Dave Barrett who told him he could catch pneumonia sitting there.

But Ferguson says he will sit on the steps every day until he gets some action.

Phillips Denies BCR Involvement

The B.C. government has not attempted to influence a B.C. Railway dispute with another Alberta contracting firm, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Thursday.

Phillips said the government had not relayed a position to the BCR board of directors about a demand by Keen Industries Ltd. and its subsidiary K.R.M. Construction Ltd. that the government owned railway renegotiate its contract.

The BCR board of directors met Thursday in a bid to reach a decision on the Keen dispute.

Keen has withdrawn all but 20 men who have been left on the site of the Dease Lake extension of the railway, the same stretch of line involved in the M.E.L. Paving Ltd. dispute which is now under investigation by the ministry of the attorney-general.

M.E.L. charged that the railway in 1972 had deliberately altered construction estimates and in late December settled out of court for $2.5 million.

The opposition charged during question period Thursday that the BCR directors should make no settlement with one contractor while the settlement with another is under investigation.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett charged outside the legislature that the board of directors meeting showed a "serious lack of responsibility."

"It's a continuation of the cover-up," he said.

Rice Liquor Fatal

SEREMBAN, Malaysia (Reuter) — Twelve persons have died here after drinking an illicitly distilled rice liquor called samsu, officials said Thursday. They said four Malaysians, including one woman, died in hospital after drinking samsu at underground "bamboo bars" in this regional capital. Eight others died earlier and two are seriously ill.

Zender, Kite Fire Seven-Under Par 65s

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bob Zender and Tom Kite performed some last-hole heroics for the lead in the $180,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open, but they had to be keeping an anxious eye on threatiening Tom Watson.

Watson scored only the second hole-in-one of his pro career with an eight-iron shot that hit to the left of the hole, ran about three feet past, then rolled back into the hole. That helped him to a six-under-par 66 Thursday that left him one shot back of Kite and Zender, each of whom birdied the final hole for 65, seven under par.

Watson, a former British Open champion who has finished fourth and first in his last two starts, was tied with Homero Blancas and Lon Hinkle. At 67, five-under-par, were veteran Don January, Leonard Thompson, Bill Rogers, Barry Jaeckel, Rick Acton, Australian Bob Shearer, Dennie Meyer and rookie Jay Haas.

Ben Crenshaw headed a group of more than a dozen at 69. Defending champion J. C. Snead had a 71, while Arnold Palmer, playing with a painful sprain in his right hand, was far gack at 74. George Knudson of Toronto was not entered.

In all, 81 of the starting field of 156 bettered par 72 at the Torrey Pines Golf Club.

Canucks' Defence Improving

Times News Services

Have things turned around for Vancouver Canucks?

That could well be the case, but the trailers in the National Hockey League's Smyth Division might have trouble moving up the ladder because the fortunes of Colorado Rockies also seem to be on the upswing.

A goal by Hilliard Graves with less than eight minutes remaining gave Vancouver a 1-1 tie with Chicago Black Hawks but the Canucks failed to gain ground on fourth-place Colorado Thursday when the Rockies surprised Boston Bruins 6-4.

Ivan Boldirev's 15th goal of the season provided Chicago with the go-ahead goal earlier in the final period.

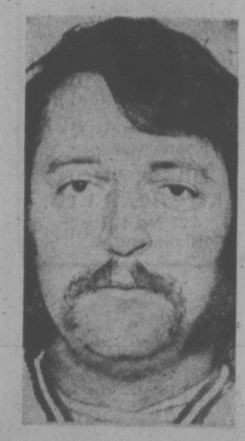
Goaltenders Curt Ridley of Vancouver and Tony Esposito of Chicago stood out in the game before 15,652 fans but for Canuck coach Orland Kurtenbach, there was delight in the performance of his defence.

Vancouver's defence, bolstered by the acquisition of Larry Goodenough and Jack McIlhargey in a trade with Philadelphia Flyers last week, performed well. Canucks have allowed only three goals in the two games played since the trade.

In other games Thursday, the Flyers blanked the Smythe Division-leading St. Louis Blues 2-0, Toronto Maple Leafs edged New York Islanders 2-1, Atlanta Braves and Buffalo Sabres played to a 1-1 draw, Washington Capitals surprised Detroit Red Wings 4-1 and Pittsburgh Penguins blanked New York Rangers 3-0.

Pittsburgh goalie Dunc Wilson continues to show well against former teammates.

Nine days ago in Vancouver, Wilson shut out the Canucks, who dealt him to Toronto in 1973 and Thursday night, the 28-year-old Toronto native took care of another club who gave up on him—New York Rangers.



DUNC WILSON
. . . haults ex-mates

Wilson, acquired by Pittsburgh Penguins from the Rangers for cash and other considerations last Oct. 8, stopped 30 shots to record his fourth shutout of the season as the Penguins defeated the Rangers.

The Rangers, who have one win, six losses and three ties in their last 10 outings, have managed just a tie in three games against Wilson and the Penguins.

"It felt super," said Wilson after Thursday's triumph. "It's always nice to come in here and beat the people who gave up on you. I probably do play a little harder against them if that's possible."

16-Year-Old Takes Slalom

SAINT GERVAIS, France (AP) — France's 16-year-old Perrine Pelen won her second World Cup slalom race in three days and soared into the front ranks of the world's skiing elite today.

Pelen beat her compatriot Patricia Emonet by more than eight-tenths of a second to win the World Cup slalom of the Mont Blanc international ski tournament here.

Pelen recovered after a shaky start and pushed herself down the hard and precipitous course with both poles to make up for her initial fault. She nearly fell in her rush to get to the finish line but recovered her balance.

Austria's Monika Kaserer was third in 84.70, followed by Germany's Pamela Behr, who narrowly led Pelen after the first heat, with 84.78.

Pelen's main rival, Switzerland's World Cup leader Lise-Marie Morerod, who has won five of the seven World Cup special slalom and giant slalom races this season, was eliminated in the first heat. Her right ski pole remained stuck in the snow as she made a flying start at the top of the precipitous 46-gate course with a drop of 592 feet.

MUNARI WINS MONTE CARLO

MONTE CARLO (Reuter) — Sandro Munari of Italy, driving a Lancia Stratos, was named the official winner today of the 1977 Monte Carlo auto rally.

It was Munari's fourth Monte Carlo title. He won previously in 1972, 1975 and 1976, each time in a Lancia.

Jean Claude Andruet, in a Fiat Abarth 131, placed second, and Antonio Zanini of Spain was third in a Seat 124.

Oak Bay Moves In On Leader

Tom Hatcher and Mike Taaffe combined for a massive one-two scoring punch Thursday night to lead Oak Bay to 93-81 victory over league-leading Victoria Athletics in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game at Lambrick Park School.

The win pushed Oak Bay, unbeaten in seven games since Christmas, to within two points of Athletics.

Hatcher fired 27 points and Taafe dunked 23 for a combined total of 50 points.

Duff McCaghey scored 21 points to pace Athletics, who suffered their second loss in 18 starts this season.

NO PAY? NO COMMENT

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mel Swig, majority owner of the financially troubled Cleveland Barons of the National Hockey League, said he had no comment Thursday when asked about reports he might not be able to meet his team's Feb. 1 payroll.

The Barons are normally paid on the 15th and last days of each month, with each payroll estimated at about $100,000.

Totems, Spartans Share Lead

Victoria Totems and Claremont Spartaps moved into a three-way tie for first place with idle Spectrum in the "A" division of the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League with victories over their hosts Thursday night.

Totems rallied in the dying seconds to pull out a 55-52 win over Mt. Douglas Rams while Spartans held off a rally to down Belmont Braves, 95-87.

In the only other game, Esquimalt Dockers moved into a second-place tie with Mt. Douglas in the "B" division by mauling Reynolds Roadrunners 71-47 at Esquimalt.

Rams led by one point and had possession with 30 seconds remaining but Ian Bridge made a steal and scored with 16 seconds left to put Totems one point up. Then, when Mt. Douglas regained possession, Bob Godfrey stole the ball again and scored the final Victoria basket just as the buzzer sounded.

The lead changed hands several times through the game with Victoria leading 22-20 at the half and 38-36 going into the final quarter.

After getting away to a slow start, Claremont took a 20-19 lead after the first quarter and were ahead the rest of the way. They led 49-39 at the half and scored on 13 of 18 free-throw attempts to hold off a Belmont rally in the final quarter.

Jim Wong led Victoria with 16 points, Mike Wyatt set the pace for Claremont with 19 and Bill Barber dunked 21 points to spark the Esquimalt victory.

In the Greater Victoria High School Girls' League, Reynolds Roadrunners ran an unbeaten streak to six gams by downing host Esquimalt Dockers, 57-41.

Rhonda Kellar scored 23 points to lead Reynolds, which plays host to an eight-team invitational tournament starting at 3:30 today. Other teams in the tourney are Port Moody Blues, Mt. Douglas Ramblers, Point Grey Greyhounds, Belmont Tomahawks, Richmond Colts, North Vancouver and Parkland Panthers.

In other games Victoria Tigers also boosted an unbeaten record to six games with a 45-35 decision over host Ramblers, Claremont Spartans handed Tomahawks a fifth straight loss with a 31-26 win at Belmont and Panthers defeated visiting Spectrum, 58-35.

Stasia Gallagher came up with the highest individual output in league play so far this season — 28 points — to spark the Parkland victory.

HIGGINS SPARKS BAYS TO OPENING TRIUMPH

WINNIPEG — Oak Bay Bays, ranked No. 1 in British Columbia, advanced to the semi-finals of the International high school boys' basketball tournament here Thursday with a 54-50 win over Kelvin Clippers of Winnipeg.

Craig Higgins led the Bays with 24 points and Ken Kirzinger added 14. Bays led 28-25 at half time.

In other games, Westwood Warriors of Winnipeg dropped St. Francis Brown of Calgary 82-79 in overtime. Runnymead Redmen of Toronto demolished Fort Richmond Centurians of Winnipeg 82-34 and the host Tech Voc Hornets dropped a 64-20 decision to Oakwood Barons of Toronto.

Great Pumpkin Gains In Volleyball Race

Great Pumpkin moved to within one point of leading Namdor by winning all four games Thursday night in Victoria Senior "B" Men's Volleyball League play at CFB Esquimalt gymnasium.

Pumpkin posted 15-11, 15-9 decisions over Khalsa and 15-3, 15-3 wins over Multigrade while Namdor topped Zooid 15-10, 15-13 but split against CFB Esquimalt, winning 15-10 and losing 15-5.

Two two top teams meet in the final night of league play Feb. 3.

Standings and other results:

Namdor, 36 points; Great Pumpkin, 35; Khalsa, 33; Zoold, 22; CFB Esquimalt, 20; Suke Teachers, 20; Royal Roads, 12; Multigrade, 11; Allenby Ford, 9.

Suke Teachers topped Royal Roads 15-7, 16-11 and Allenby Ford 16-14, 15-7; CFB Esquimalt topped Zooid 15-9, 15-9; Khalsa topped Multigrade 15-4, 15-5; Royal Roads topped Allenby Ford 15-4, 15-10.

Jets Don't Find A Home In Dixie

By The Canadian Press

The high-flying Winnipeg Jets made their first trip to Dixie on Thursday night and probably don't ever want to go back.

The Jets were shut out by Birmingham goalie John Garrett and the Bulls took a 3-0 win in one of two World Hockey Association games. New England Whalers defeated San Diego Mariners 5-3 in the other game.

It was the first shutout loss of the season for the Jets who earlier this week beat Calary 10-5.

And it was the first shutout win of the season for Birmingham.

Pete Marrin scored the only goal Garrett needed at 9:30 of the opening period. Third-period goals by Mark Napier, his 35th, and Jeff Jacques closed the scoring.

Ferguson's Total Reaches $8,000

CHANDLER, Ariz. — Kelowna's Dave Barr faltered badly but Cec Ferguson recovered the collection touch in the final round of a National Golfers of America tournament here Thursday.

The British Columbia pros both finished with 72-hole totals of 284, four under par, and pocketed $1,031 in the San Marcos Open.

Ferguson closed with a four-under 68 Thursday to go with earlier rounds of 74, 71 and 71. Barr's rounds were 66, 67, 74, 77. Barr led the field by three strokes after 36 holes.

Other B.C. golfers finished out of the money in the NGA's windup event. Bob Cox of Vancouver closed with a 73 and a 295 total, Muncie Booth had a 73 for 297 and southpaw Bob Beauchemin, another rookie pro from Victoria, closed with an 81 for 316.

Both Ferguson, who has won about $8,000 in four NGA tournaments played during the past three months, and Beauchemin plan to join a new American Golf Tour which started Jan. 18.

Each AGT test offers a guaranteed minimum of $25,000 in prize money. Tournaments are scheduled throughout the Western and Central states.

First prize of $5,000 at San Marcos went to Tim Simpson of Atlanta, who birdied the third extra hole to win a three-way playoff Thursday.

Simpson fired a 69 to finish at 278, tied with Mike Shea of New Orleans and Roger Simpkins of Bethesda, Md. Simpkins shot 68 and Shea 71 Thursday.

JUNIOR HOCKEY COACHES SUSPENDED INDEFINITELY

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Coaches Larry McNabb of Nanaimo Clippers and Doug Sauter of Abbotsford Flyers were suspended indefinitely Thursday by Ernie McLean, chairman of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League.

The suspensions were the result of a bench-clearing brawl Wednesday night in Nanaimo which ended with the Flyers in their dressing room after refusing to return to the ice with 5:55 left in the game.

Game officials awarded the game to the Clippers, who were leading 5-3 at the time of the outburst.

McLean said the Nanaimo team was fined $1,000 for not providing visiting players protection on the way to the dressing room from the ice surface.

He said the coaches were suspended for not controlling their respective teams.

McLean also suspended seven players involved in the incident.

Barry Pederson of Nanaimo was suspended for three games for being the first player detected by game officials to leave the players' bench, while Andrew Gourlay of Nanaimo and Pat McGill of Abbotsford were suspended one game each for fighting in one of the players' benches.

Aaron Ruck and Claude Morton of Nanaimo and Larry Melnyk and Jim Dobson of Abbotsford all were suspended one game for leaving the penalty box to enter the on-ice altercation.

McLean also said that a Nanaimo-affilitated junior B player — Terry Jacobson, who was not dressed for the game — was suspended for the balance of the season for fighting with Flyer players near the Abbotsford dressing room. Jacobson will not be allowed to play for any BCJHL team for the rest of the season, McLean said.

The incident began at 14:05 of the third period after Abbotsford goaltender Larry Lozinski and forward Torri Robertson of the Clippers got into a high-sticking duel.

Both coaches went onto the ice surface in an attempt to restore order and Sauter then pulled his team from the ice.

Sauter refused to allow the Flyers to return and complete the game and, after a two-minute warning elapsed, Nanaimo was awarded the win.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Red-hot starting game of 355 helped launch Sandy MacNeil into winners' list in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Sandy rolled 255-290-232—877 series in Wednesday A.M. Ladies League at Town and Country Lanes to top women's fivepin division in 14th week of 14th annual competition.

Hoffmann Takes Title

HELSINKI (AP) — East Germany's Jan Hoffmann beat Andrei Kovalev of the Soviet Union in the free program Thursday to win the European men's figure skating championship vacated by Britain's John Curry last year.

The 21-year-old student produced five triple jumps against Kovalev's three and with that and better technical skill he overtook the 24-year-old Russian, who had built a slim lead after the two compulsory programs.

Britain's 19-year-old Robin Cousins rose to third place with his artistic free skating and Yuri Ovehinnikov of the Soviet Union placed fourth, passing Finland's Pekka Leskinen.

Earlier, Irina Rodina and Aleksandr Zaitsev led a Soviet sweep of the pairs competition. Irina Vorobieva and Aleksandr Vlasov won the silver medal and Marina Teherksova and Serge Skhral, the bronze.

It was the ninth European title for Rodina who has also won eight world crowns, the last four with Zaitsev as her partner.

Salmon Fishing Varies, Steelhead Still Scarce

Salmon fishing for winter chinooks varies from poor to good in various Vancouver Island spots, but steelheaders still have to rely on slim pickings from a handful of rivers.

Strip, minnows or hootchies fished right along the bottom have been catching chinooks from five to 12 pounds off Secretary Island and the Bluffs.

Killer whales went through Becher Bay on Tuesday and dampened action somewhat, but a few chinooks to 16 pounds started to show late Wednesday near Church Rock and Bedford Island. Strip, minnows or blue Squirts fished between 60 and 90 feet in depth have worked best.

Pedder Bay fishermen are landing chinooks to 17 pounds near Christopher Point and through Race Pass, using blue and green Squirts with a silver insert or strip in a green head. Use a 30 to 36-inch leader with the Squirts and a 25 to 30-inch leader with the strip and troll with a rotating flasher at about the 90-foot level.

Trollers using strip about 40 to 50 feet from the surface are boating chinooks to 24 pounds off Fiddle Reef and, to a lesser extent, Trial Island.

Returns from Constance Banks and Middle Bank are also starting to pick up.

Returns are extremely poor off Deep Cove, but a few chinooks to nine pounds have been landed along The Wall, as well as off Indian Bay and Bamberton. Strip or anchovies fished with about 200 feet of wire line and planer work best.

Numerous bluebacks and smaller chinooks have been taken in the vicinity of Indian Bay.

Further south, in Finlayson Arm, trollers working Squirts off Goldstream Island and in Misery Bay are picking up chinooks to 13 pounds. Bucktailers in the same areas are landing numerous blues — but you have to be at the right place at the right time.

Bold Bluff is still a likely spot for some successful chinook mooching off Duncan.

Returns at Departure Bay have dropped off and the feed seems to have shifted south to Harmac, where fishermen casting Buzz-Bombs and Stingsildas off the wharf and log booms are picking up good returns of chinooks in the six to eight-pound range.

Catches of chinooks to 10 pounds are still increasing off the mouth of Alberni Inlet near Rainy Bay and off Sarita.

Good catches of chinooks to 18 pounds and many jacks are grabbing No. 4½ Tom Mack spoons or blue hootchie-type lures fished with a dodger and about six ounces of lead in Lambert Channel and Baynes Sound. The best bite right now is between 2 and 4:30 p.m.

"Coronation" bucktails are landing chinooks to 14 pounds off Menzies Bay, the Discovery Light and near Willow Point at Campbell River.

Anyone with a yen for a little different type of fishing and a taste-tempting treat might like to try what Dan Talbot was doing earlier this week. He landed a 30-pound red snapper while casting with a Deadly Dick off Arbutus Point.

Most of the smaller streams on Vancouver Island are too low for steelheading, but some half-decent catches have been made in the lower part of the San Juan River, below the Silver Bridge in the Cowichan River, above the Bore Hole in the Nanaimo River and in the Stamp.

Five City Skaters Head for Calgary

This year's Canadian figure skating championships in Calgary, scheduled to get under way next Monday, may be remembered for the burst of new faces on the scene.

A total of 143 skaters, one of the largest entries in recent years, will vie for novice, junior and senior titles.

The list includes five Victoria skaters.

They are Peter, Olive and Jennifer Coomes, and Vanessa and Jeffrey Mawle, all of the Racquet Club.

Peter, 17, will team up with 14-year-old Julie Mutcher of Coquitlam in the junior pairs competition. The Mawles are entered in the novice pairs while Jennifer and Oliver Coomes will compete in the novice dance event.

At least three new senior champions will be declared this year since Toller Cranston's professional ice show signed all the defending national champions except Lynn Nightingale, a former Victorian who now lives in Ottawa.

One reason for the increase in competitors is the introduction of a qualifying competition for the Atlantic provinces. Skaters qualify for the nationals by playing in the top four in the four divisional meets across the country.

BLANSHARD GRABS TITLE

Blanshard upset defending champion Richmond 15-6, 15-12, 15-11 Wednesday to capture the Greater Victoria elementary school boys' volleyball crown. The final was played at Rockheights.

Islanders Surprise Red Wings

MILL BAY — Hapless Kerry Park Islanders of Mill Bay finally came through Thursday night and picked up their second win in 32 south Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League starts with a 9-8 decision over visiting Victoria Ray's Red Wings.

Ted Lamereoux and Rick Jackson set the pace for Islanders with three goals each while Andy Nash, who scored the only goal in the third period for the winning margin, finished with two and Corky Adams supplied one.

Wayne Proceviat fired five goals for Victoria to move three ahead of Kevin Kennedy of Saanich Braves in the individual scoring race. He now has 36 goals, tying him with the record set last season by Ron Vincent of Saanich.

Monty Drummond added two goals for Wings and Kim Turney scored once.

Canoe Club Opens Sunday

This is the time of the year when the members of the Victoria Canoe Club look forward to the start of another busy season.

The first item on the agenda is a trip on the Sooke River, beginning Sunday at 9 a.m.

Allan Roger, who was recently elected president, is in charge of this one and can be reached at 478-5187 if further information is needed.

Serving with Allan this year will be vice-president Frank Jbhnson, secretary Irene Pawlas and treasurer Dave Suttil. This year's directors are Dennis O'Gormann, Bob Whittet, school canoeing coordinator; Doug Collins, Stan Luzzi, river instruction, and Fred Potter, racing chairman. Editors of the club's newsletter will be Erich and Ruth Schulz.

The next meeting of the club will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the upper hall of 550 Obed. Jack Akins will present a program on safety running the rivers, leader responsibility, follow-up boat, beachman and safety ropes.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, is pretty smug at the sailing performance of their commodore Russ Gardner. Russ races at Sidney with the Canoe Bay Sailing Club during the fall and winter. His Caprice is the winner of CBSC's Seagull Trophy, which goes to the top boat in a series of four 12-mile races. Caprice won out over 50 boats.

On Sunday CFSA is hosting the final round of team racing between the squadron and the Royal Victoria Yacht Club for the Brass Nuts Trophy, using the squadron's 420s.

Racing gets under way at 10:30 a.m. and the squadron is hoping to equalize the score, RVYC having won all three of the races sailed at Cadboro Bay two weeks ago.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association has two around-the-buoy races slated for Sunday. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. They're hoping for better weather conditions than last Sunday when not a single boat, because of lack of wind, was able to finish the RVYC long-distance race within the time limit.

The RVYC's Cal 20 fleet will compete in the second race of its B series on Saturday with the race getting under way at 1:30 p.m.

AROUND OUR SHORES

The club's Laser sailors will have another round of series racing on Saturday, starting at the same time as the Cals.

Charles Simpson won the first of the three races sailed last Saturday. Runners-up were Eric Jespersen and Dave Richardson.

The second time around it was Bob Britten, followed by Barry Wright and Eric. Kim Hellwig won the last race, edging out Bob and Dave for top honors.

Short Tacks — There'll be no column next week. Instead I'm hanging out the 'Gone Sailing" sign. The Dufours have been invited down to Portland by Swiftsure friends who are anxious to introduce us to their sailing scene.

KNOX TO COACH LIONS?

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Press says Detroit Lions will acquire coach Chuck Knox from Los Angeles Rams in a National Football League trade that will send Lion players or draft picks to the Rams.

The newspaper says the remaining stumbling block to the deal is compensation to the Rams for the loss of Knox.

However, a spokesman for the Lions said the story was "ridiculous."

He said "There's nothing going on from here, and when we name a head coach, you'll all know about it."

Spokesmen for the Rams and the NFL also said they were unaware of such a deal, which would be the first coach-for-players swap in professional football.

Take Apartheid Stand

LONDON (Reuter) — British athletes will be asked to take a stand against apartheid which could mean their refusal to compete in the 1978 Commonwealth Games at Edmonton, Jim Aukett, a 400-metres specialist, said today.

Aukett, who is also secretary of Britain's International Athletes Club (IAC), said he would urge the IAC to press the British Amateur Athletic Board and the associations of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Island to break off all contact with any country which "practises, supports or encourages apartheid."

Aukett said he would put his proposal to the IAC, which has a membership of 400 British International athletes, at its committee meeting Feb. 6.

He added that he would present the signatures of a dozen black British internationals who support his view on apartheid.

"It is my belief, and that of the people who have signed my letter, that all contact with South Africa and any country which supports them should be destroyed completely," Aukett said.

"All the black athletes who have read the letter and signed it have said that they are prepared to go as far as boycotting the Commonwealth Games."

Aukett said the signatures he has already include Daley Thompson, the world junior decathlon record holder, and world-class sprinter Sonia Lannaman.

TOWN TALK

There's been talk of Liberal leader Gordon Gibson joining Social Credit, and Conservative leader Dr. Scott Wallace is known as a "red" Tory for his liberal philosophy on social welfare policies, but what in the name of Sir James Douglas is the "NDP-Liberal Conservative caucus?"

A hand-lettered sign on the main floor of the Legislative Buildings directs visitors and petitioners upstairs to the offices of this political hybrid.

Another strange one the sign-painters perpetrated — on the door of Gibson's office, where the lone MLA works, is a plaque reading "Liberal Members."

Makes for interesting caucuses, Town Talk surmises. Me, myself and I?

Wonder what kind of CRTC regulations cover some of those raunchy with a capital R flicks that show up late at night, particularly on Vancouver's CKVU?

There's usually a voice-over warning that such movies, because of their content, require parental discretion and that some scenes may not be suitable for family viewing.

Maybe that's all the CRTC requires.

But there's a body of opinion that the voice should warn viewers that what they're about to see, nine times out of 10, is a load of junk that's devoid of plot, acting skill and artistic merit.

That's class, CKVU, real class.

There was never a doubt in Jack Barnes's mind how he'd spend his retirement: fishing.

He had it all worked out but last Aug. 13, only 18 days before he was due to retire after 29 years service with the Victoria fire department, his boat collided with a barge near Trial Island. Barnes was tossed into the water and drowned.

After his death his co-workers wanted to memorialize him in some way. They held a collection among themselves and with the proceeds brought materials to build a trophy—gold finished figures of salmon mounted on a base.

The trophy — the Jack Barnes Memorial Trophy — is now completed and earlier this month the firemen presented it to the James Bay Anglers' Association. It will be awarded for the first time later this year during the association's annual fishing derby.

The association also received another memorial to Jack. This one's from the Safety Supply Co. in Victoria: a gold plated fireman's helmet.

METCALFE
. . . out

If you're wondering why you haven't heard commentator Ben Metcalfe on CBC's Good Morning Show lately, there's a good reason.

He's been sacked.

Metcalfe got the word last week from CBC's big gun in B.C., Len Lauk, who told him CBC could no longer afford his services.

Metcalfe got a laugh out of that. CBC only paid him $60 an item. That worked out to $120 a week.

Metcalfe suspects the real reason is he touched too much and too often on controversial subjects.

The real irony in Metcalfe's dismissal is he just received word he has been nominated, for the third time, for the Gordon Sinclair Award for outstanding broadcasting.

A Saanich resident recently back from a trip to the Far East reports, contrary to what he was told here before leaving, Chargex is not widely accepted in Hong Kong.

"A few places do accept it but not many and when you ask to pay by the card you have to pay the asking price, while if you've got cash you can bargain," he said.

He'd like to see more businessmen in Victoria become as enlightened. He said he went to one downtown store this week, found it accepted Chargex and then asked how much off if he paid cash.

"The clerk just laughted at me," he said.

The Times has been able to find only one firm in Victoria that offers a discount for cash — Peter Pollen Ford.

Pollen gives five per cent off for cash sales — but the offer's only good for service and not new or used cars. Sorry 'bout that.

Thirteen years after it was officially opened, Centennial Square will soon be officially named.

Flat, bronze letters identifying the square will be installed on the stone facade above the Air Canada building at a cost of about $850.

What Victoria lacks in commercial ship-handling facilities it makes up in tourist accommodation and the people in the port and harbor business know it.

The annual meeting of the Canadian Port and Harbor Association in September is being hosted by the Port Alberni Harbor Commission with arrangements being organized by port manager Don Brooks.

Site of the convention? It's Victoria, one of the few Canadian commercial ports without a harbor commission.

Oak Bay Lions today had the satisfaction of giving municipal recreation director Dunc Russell $3,500 to bring Henderson Park baseball diamond within 98 per cent of completion.

The $17,000 undertaking for senior Babe Ruth players — 16-18 years — is expected to be ready in April, with teams meanwhile using Windsor Park.

As opposition members dozed off in the legislature this week during Kahl's reply to the budget speech, he provided them with a perfect opening line for their barbs.

After a long dissertation on the prison system, Kahl suggested the "classic problem in prisons is boredom," a statement that brought hoots from the opposition and even a few smiles from his own colleagues.

The days of motor boats on Elk Lake appear to be numbered — because a handful of mad boat drivers have annoyed too many people too often.

Saanich Ald. Fred Severson told a regional parks committee meeting that one pilot had told him of a power boat making speedy figure 8s on the lake, blocking his landing.

And Mrs. Phyllis Davis recently wrote the region in support of such a ban, noting the lake's swans have "mysteriously disappeared" in recent years.

Executive director Dennis Young said there are reports the swans and other wildlife are frequently chased by power boaters "who thought it was great fun to harass them."

Psst! Hey civilian. Wanna buy an Army jeep cheap? No? How about a dump truck or a semi-trailer truck?

There are about 80 vehicles and sundry other used military items going on sale or up for auction Feb. 3, 4 and 5. Surely there's something you would like to bid on. How about some good used church pews?

The federal Crown Assets Disposal Corp. is scheduling its first Vancouver Island cash and carry sale and auction at CFB Esquimalt.

Cash and carry sale runs all three days in building 517 from 5:30 p.m. on to 10 p.m. on Feb. 3 and 4, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Feb. 5. The auction will be held Feb. 5 starting at 10 a.m. at Work Point Barracks, Macaulay Point.

Townhouse Proposal Rejected

A townhouse proposal for property at 3010 Quadra was rejected by Victoria city council Thursday, following a public hearing at which several residents of the area opposed the developers' plans.

Leo and Ann Kuta were seeking a land-use contract allowing them to build four townhouses and a three-unit addition to an existing house on the property.

When the vote was called by acting mayor Ald. Bill Tindall not a single member of council was prepared to move that the bylaw receive final approval.

With their application refused, the developers must wait at least a year before they can re-submit revised plans.

In other business, council tabled a controversial city-initiated bylaw to down-zone several properties in the Dallas-Bushby area of Fairfield from medium-density apartment to the garden apartment category.

At a public hearing earlier this week, several residents of the area complained that the down-zoning would not offer sufficient protection against apartment encroachment. They want council to rezone the area to single-family or duplex.

Council also gave final approval to 42 individual bylaws designating residential properties as heritage homes.

SKIN PADS which deliver mild electrical stimulation, in contrast to needles, are also being assessed by acupuncture clinic in its efforts to relieve pain.

Acupuncture Helps Only One in Four

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The acupuncture clinic at Victoria General Hospital which opened 14 months ago has achieved only modest success in treating certain kinds of pain.

In fact more than half the patients treated reported no change.

But a report delivered to the hospital board Thursday night noted that the clinic handled only tough cases which had defied more traditional forms of treatment.

Of the 408 people getting treatment from November of 1975 to last December, 5.4 per cent experienced excellent improvement, 16.6 per cent moderate improvement and 20.3 per cent slight improvement, clinic director Dr. H. H. Macartney reported.

A total of 55.8 per cent of patients experienced no change and 1.96 per cent were worse.

"Although in our hands we have not been able to reproduce the incredible results quoted by other sources in the popular press, nevertheless, it appears that acupuncture does have a definite place in the symptomatic relief of certain forms of chronic pain, particularly of the arthritic type," his report said.

The Victoria General clinic and one opened earlier at Vancouver General Hospital are the only two of their kind in B.C.

"The chief aim of the clinic has been to assess the value of acupuncture in the management of chronic pain problems which are unresponsive to usual orthodox treatments," Macartney said.

"Despite considerable pressure from the public to treat other problems such as obesity, smoking, sexual difficulties, multiple sclerosis, we have adhered to our original policy."

To get acupuncture, patients had to be referred to the clinic by their own doctor and were screened by a clinic committee.

They were given six 20-minute treatments spread over two weeks. About one in 10 were given additional treatments.

The report said there were virtually no complaints about the $5 charge by the government for each session.

Dr. C. K. Chan, medical acupuncturist, used both traditional acupuncture points and points overlying nerve fibres and muscles adjacent to the pain site.

Self treatment at home and use of conductive skin pads instead of needles are being evaluated, Macartney said.

Two general types of pain were treated, those from rheumatism-like conditions and from neurological problems, such as headaches, neuralgia and neuritis.

Biggest block of patients were in the 60-to-70 age group. There were 230 females and 178 males.

How acupuncture works is still obscure, the clinic director said, although likely relief of muscle spasm around painful joints is one factor.

"Exhaustion of the sensory nerves or alteration of pain transmission may also be involved.

"Undoubtedly faith in the treatment must be influential in a good response and in some cases treatment may coincide with natural cyclical improvement in symptoms."

Hayes' Vote Blocks Foes Of Cabaret

Victoria city council's threat to close the cabaret at the James Bay Inn fizzled Thursday when aldermen failed to produce the unanimous vote required.

Ald. John Hayes, who warned earlier he would not support such "unprecedented" action, voted against a motion to deny the renewal of trades licences for the inn's lounge and dining lounge operations.

Instead, council passed a motion asking the Liquor Administration Branch to impose licensing restrictions on the hotel's cabaret and cocktail lounge operations.

Ald. Murray Glazier, who moved that council not renew the trades licenses, said here is ample evidence to show that the cabaret is a source of noise and irritation to nearby residents.

In the absence of any restrictive licensing action by the LAB, he said, council had to ask itself whether a cabaret is a suitable use in that residential area.

Hayes pointed out that the proprietor has obtained the necessary liquor licences and the site is zoned for commercial use.

"Despite that, we are going to take his trades licences away because we don't like what he is doing. If that isn't a Catch-22 situation I don't know what is."

He said the saying caveat emptor — buyer beware — is applicable in this situation. "I like peace and quiet. That's why I didn't buy a house across from the James Bay Inn."

He said he doesn't care for the type of "heavy-handed tactics" residents are asking the city to employ against the inn's owners. "I think it's grossly unfair."

Bill Wellburn, owner-manager of the James Bay Inn, told council that the cabaret's operating nights had been cut back to only Friday and Saturday nights — it was previously open on Thursdays as well — and an extra doorman hired to ensure patrons left the premises as quietly as possible.

He claimed the whole issue had been "exaggerated a lot" and clouded by "sensationalism."

"We are trying to operate this business the best way we know how," Wellburn added. "It's one of the best-run operations of its kind in the province."

It's All You Auto Know

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. has published a booklet designed to help motorists understand the complexities of automobile insurance.

ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick said in a news release he feels the guide called "All About Autoplan" will be helpful because it removes the legal verbiage "which has often prevented people from reading the fine print."

$1 Museum Deal Worked Out By City, Gov't

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A valuable piece of real estate in downtown Victoria which the city of Victoria purchased in 1963 for $110,000 and is now valued at around $500,000 will be sold for $1 — and the city seems to consider it's got a good deal.

The property is the old courthouse building in Bastion Square housing the Maritime Museum of B.C.

City council was told Thursday that the provincial government — which had originally sold the building to the city 14 years ago — has agreed to an offer to pick it up for a nominal $1 subject to certain conditions.

It's the conditions that make the transfer an attractive one to the city, and which also spare council the embarrassment of having to evict a respected institutional tenant.

And, from the museum's point of view, the agreement also appears to provide a security of tenure — either in the present building or some other future location — which has been lacking in the past.

"It sounds like a splendid arrangement to me," museum curator Capt. Keith Cameron commented today. "Frankly, I was hoping something like this would materialise."

A key clause in the tentative agreement, which has been endorsed by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, states that the province "would assume responsibility for the location of the Maritime Museum, whether in the courthouse building or another location."

Under the deal the province would also undertake to pay the city its standard 15-mill grant in lieu of taxes on the building; to retain it in public ownership and "active use;" and to upgrade its construction and fire safety standards "if and when" the museum is relocated.

For several years, successive city councils have complained that the Maritime Museum's rent-free and tax-free occupancy of the courthouse building — with maintenance thrown in — placed a heavy burden on taxpayers.

In effect, they said, the city was having to subsidize, by as much as $50,000 to $60,000 a year, a cultural asset which has province-wide significance.

Under the mayoralty of Peter Pollen, council gave the museum notice to vacate the premises and in the summer of 1975 the building was put up for sale. But there were no takers and since then the museum has occupied it on a month-to-month basis.

KAHL

Shufflers Shafted By Kahl

Esquimalt MLA Lyle Kahl doesn't think much of the Capital Region Board and board chairman Jim Campbell doesn't think much of Kahl.

Socred Kahl carried his battle in to the legislature Thursday, calling the region a bureaucracy of paper shufflers.

"It's a third level bureaucracy of paper shufflers we can do without," Kahl said during budget debate.

He said people go to the regional offices and get shuffled from office to office, only to find no one has any jurisdiction over their problem.

Gorst, NDP MLA for the same riding in the last government, failed to win his party's nomination prior to the last election.

Tear Gas 'Drug' Deadly?

A drug known as Lance has been circulating in drug circles in the U.S. and RCMP have issued a Canada-wide warning for police and the public to be on the lookout for it.

Lance, a white powder resembling cocaine or heroin, is a lethal form of tear gas that can cause irreparable brain damage or death.

RCMP Sgt. Bob Hawkes of the Victoria joint forces drug section said today there have been no reported instances to date of the drug being found in Canada.

Details released by U.S. border police say the drug has been found in Colorado, Oregon, Washington and in Texas where a young girl who thought she was sniffing cocaine was later admitted to hospital as a mentally handicapped person.

The drug, sold in a sealed plastic bag as either cocaine or occasionally as heroin, is so potent sniffing it causes irreparable brain damage and tasting it causes instant death.

Even being in the same area where a package of lance is opened can cause brain damage, Hawkes said.

If it touches the skin, it causes a burning sensation, and attempts to dilute it in water may result in brain damage or death.

No one knows why the drug is being distributed. One RCMP staff Sergeant said it's possible its distribution was intended to kill police officers and drug users.

Or it may be the case of someone making a profit with no regard to the effect the substance has on its victims.

Soil Is Key to Good Gardening

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

With a small first-time vegetable garden, instead of an oversized plot, you can (1) pay more attention to conditioning the soil, (2) keep weeds in check easier, and (3) learn more about pest control. Our first piece of advice to the beginning vegetable gardener is: "A small area well cared for will yield more than a large plot that is neglected."

Good soil (light, fluffy, and well-drained) is the foundation of any successful garden, no matter how large or small. We'd estimate that 75 per cent of all problems encountered by first-time gardeners — whether the problem in question is disease, pests, lack of vigor, poor germination, or poor flavor — can be traced directly to the condition of the soil.

When you begin a garden, you need to prepare the earth in three ways: (1) Dig it up and dig deep. (2) Remove tough weed roots, stones, and-or other debris. (3) Work lots of well-decomposed organic matter into the ground.

Many books recommend peat moss as the organic matter to spade into a vegetable patch . . . but that can be terribly expensive. Compost made from kitchen and-or garden wastes is far better, as is well-rotted manure from a barn or stable.

The main problem with using compost as the sole source of fertilizer for one's garden, however, is that the decomposed material usually is deficient in the phosphorus which is essential for early fruit formation. You can get around this problem, however, by mixing bone meal or rock phosphates (two natural sources of phosphorus) into your compost pile, or by applying them directly to the soil.

And, of course, do be sure your garden area is well-drained. If the soon-to-be vegetable patch is water-logged or difficult to dry out, for heaven's sake put down a layer of crushed stone and build a raised bed!

For many beginners, the selection of "what to grow" is the most confusing aspect of gardening. Catalog descriptions all seem to read the same ("super!," "best!," "most productive!"), and those seed packets you buy from the local nursery aren't really very valuable when it comes to helping you choose one particular variety of, say, lettuce or cucumbers over another.

For the experienced gardener the selection of seeds is perhaps the most important part of gardening." For now, let me just emphasize that it's important for beginners to start with easy-to-grow varieties of easy-to-grow vegetables because a little success goes a long way toward one's understanding of the essentials of plant growth.

In our experiences, the easiest-to-raise crops are loose-leaf lettuce (especially Oak Leaf), radishes, zucchini squash (Burpee Hybrid), carrots (Royal Chantenay), snap beans (try the new bush Romano's), tomatoes (Supersonic is tops), peppers (such as Tasty Hybrid), parsley (any kind), and cucumbers (Marketmore 70 for disease resistance).

You'll find information on which varieties of which crops can and cannot safely be planted before your last frost date (and which seeds must be started indoors) in any good mail-order seed catalog.

Peat pellets are invaluable for starting healthy seedlings indoors. These peat disks — which expand to something like seven times their original height when you add water to them — offer an excellent medium for the germination of seeds.

You can sow tomato, pepper, cabbage and other seeds directly into the moistened peat patties and easily fit them (by the dozen) along your windowsills. Provided you follow a regular watering schedule so that the peat doesn't dry out, you'll very quickly have whole sets of hardy seedlings that you can then transplant directly into the garden.

The only drawback to peat pellets is that they come encased in a plastic netting which must be carefully removed before you set each seedling into the ground. We've found that if you leave the netting in place it'll often restrict root development and create a "pot-bound" plant.

All vegetable gardens need sunlight and moisture. Six hours of sunshine per day should be considered minimum, and the more the better. (If shade falls on your garden during the peak daylight hours, the maturation of the plants will be slowed and the garden's yields drastically cut.)

Likewise, a little too much moisture — in our opinion — is better than not enough. Even one week without a good drenching rain will dramatically retard or even stop the growth of moisture-loving crops. This doesn't mean that you should go overboard and keep your garden completely saturated all the time. Most vegetables cannot stand to have their roots permanently surrounded by water. There is a happy medium.

At the slightest sign of a dry spell, give your vegetable patch a good soaking with the garden hose and, if possible, keep the ground moist for as long as the drought lasts. (An ordinary lawn sprinkler set in the garden overnight is an excellent way to provide adequate moisture during dry weather, and a thick mulch always helps to conserve water.)

The feeding of plants seems to be a greatly misunderstood subject. Some gardeners are able to maintain a nutrient-rich soil by the use of compost alone — but only because the compost in question has been made from nutrient-bearing materials (manure, blood, etc.).

If you're using a nutrient-poor compost (one made, say, mostly from leaves or grass clippings), you're going to have to resort to the use of a commercial fertilizer. That's not as bad as it sounds, however. As long as you use a slow-release fertilizer in combination with a composting program, you should obtain satisfactory results without grossly upsetting your vegetable patch's balance of nature.

Oven-Fried Chicken, Honey-Butter Sauce

½ cup flour
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
2 tsp. paprika
½ cup butter
1 frying chicken (2½ to 3 lb.) cut up
¼ cup butter
¼ cup liquid honey
¼ cup lemon juice

Combine flour, salt, pepper and paprika in clean paper bag. Add chicken, 1 or 2 pieces at a time; shake to coat chicken well with seasoned flour. Place cup butter in large shallow baking dish (approx. 13x9x2-inch); place dish in 400 deg. F. oven until butter is melted. Remove from oven. Roll flour-coated pieces of chicken in melted butter, leaving in pan, skin side down. Bake for 30 minutes. To make honey-butter sauce — in small saucepan, melt ¼ cup butter; stir in honey and lemon juice. Remove chicken from oven; turn pieces of chicken, skin side up; drizzle honey-butter mixture over all. Continue cooking another 30 minutes, or until chicken is tender, turning once. Makes 4 servings.

Teacher Gordon Morash reads to some of his students

Kindergarten Teacher Is 'Weird' to Parents

EDMONTON (CP) — Gordon Morash, 24, believed to be the only male kindergarten teacher in the city's public school system, says although the job is tough, things so far have gone really smoothly.

Morash has the job of educating 25 youngsters in a cluttered classroom at McDougall School in the central portion of the city.

"I don't see any novelty in being a male teacher," he said.

"It is novel, though, that I'm working because the job shortage is pretty high."

Morash completed a four-year course in education at University of Alberta last spring, the only male in a class of 27 specializing in early childhood instruction.

Although he admits to being worried about "parents thinking me weird," so far there have been no difficulties.

"Part of the reason they may have put me here is because there are a lot of single-parent families in the inner city," he said, and youngsters need a male figure to balance out their lives.

One difficulty is the presence of several non-English-speaking children in his class, but Morash said he is constructing a speech program involving phonetics to assist them.

"All in all, it's a hard job. With kids in the upper elementary grades, you can assume they know what a line is. Here, your assumptions are few; you have to assume they're very imperfect little people."

He teaches every weekday morning and free-lances as a writer in the afternoon, but said, "They could coax me into teaching an afternoon session because I'm already doing the amount of work required for two classes."

Elderly Score Doctors

EDMONTON (CP) — An overwhelming majority of senior citizens feel younger people get better medical treatment from doctors than they do, says a University of Alberta Sociologist.

Dr. Earle Snider, who has released results of a three-year study, said this attitude is an example of the elderly person's negative feelings about doctors' attitudes towards providing care.

If this negative view is allowed to persist, it may eventually drive many senior citizens from seeking medical care, said Snider, who's study involved a representative sample of 428 senior citizen families not in institutions.

He found about 80 per cent of the sampling felt younger people get better medical care than they do.

Fifty-eight per cent believed doctors hold back information about illness from them. It was patients who see several doctors through referrals who were more likely to hold these negative views, suggesting some problems with how doctors manage patients, Snider said.

Despite their view of doctors' attitudes, 86 per cent of those sampled felt they should follow doctors' advice. Apparently, they still have high regard for medical science, he said.

"It's not how he (the doctor) taps them on the shoulder. They say the doctor is not hurting them. The problem rests with what they think is the doctor's attitude.

"It is far better to resolve the problem while the elderly view medical science so highly than wait until the negative attitudes about physicians infect their view on the value of medicine overall," Snider said.

Population statistics show the problem will not vanish, he says. An increasing proportion of our population (7.6 per cent as of June, 1975) is over 65 years old.

Snider's study, funded by the Medical Services Research Foundation of Alberta, also has found senior citizens rely almost exclusively on doctors for health care and counselling.

Less than six per cent said they would seek advice or direction on health matters from groups like the Victoria Order of Nurses, Edmonton home care program or the Society for the Retired and Semi-retired.

"Going to the doctor is the most expensive way of using health care," Snider said.

AFTERNOON AND EVENING CLASSES IN INTERIOR DECORATING

Joseph Egoyan

Once again the fascinating study of interior decorating will be introduced to you by theoretical and practical analysis. These lectures will be held in the store and also supplemented by on location studies in selected homes including a visit to the residence of Mr. Egoyan to discuss the problems arising in furniture arrangement, color schemes, lighting, styles, theme, drapery and carpet selection, and proper use of pictures and accessories.

Mr. Joseph Egoyan, B.A. ED., your instructor, is well qualified with extensive theoretical and practical knowledge. He is a graduate from the Art Institute of Chicago and the California College of Arts and Crafts; has taught at Oakland Tech. High Calif., the American College in Cairo and the Evening Adult Education program in Victoria. In addition, he has a wealth of practical experience in retail field as proprietor of Ego Arts Gallery in Cairo for five years, and Ego Interiors in Victoria for fifteen years. Mr. Egoyan is a qualified artist and has exhibited his art works in a number of one-man shows in the U.A.R. and U.S.A. He won first prize in Vancouver Island Jury Show at the Art Gallery of Victoria, also a one-man show theme "BIRDS" was displayed at The Victoria Provincial Museum, The Burnaby Art Gallery and is now at Ego Interiors.

For the past twelve years this course in interior decorating has been given by Mr. Egoyan twice yearly in three separate classes each week. At an average of twenty students in each class, almost a thousand students have taken the course to date.

THE CLASSES WILL BE HELD TUESDAY AFTERNOONS FROM 1 TO 2:30 P.M. AND ALSO EVENINGS ON MONDAY OR WEDNESDAY, 7:30 TO 9 P.M.

CLASSES START FEB. 21st, 22nd, OR 23rd AT EGO INTERIORS. TOTAL COST OF SIX LECTURES ONCE A WEEK, $20.00.

Man-Made Log Can Be a Hazard

caveat emptor

By LYNNE GORDON

Perhaps one of the things that makes winter bearable is a lovely, dancing fire in the fireplace. The warmth of a fire and the smell of burning wood is one enjoyable way of combating these long, dark winter nights.

Modern technology has attempted to improve the good old-fashioned wood log with a simulated version — the synthetic fire log.

The manufacture of synthetic fire logs is a good example of a by-product industry that is making use of what was once thought of as a nuisance or a waste — sawdust. Fire logs are made by compressing sawdust and mixing it with either wax or paraffin, with chemical salts often added to produce a colored flame.

Synthetic fire logs are available in grocery, department and hardware stores and are usually marketed in bright, heavy paper wrappers. They burn up to three hours and supply a constant heat of 90,000 BTUs.

Fire logs are cleaner than regular wood, as they do not leave a trail of bark and sawdust all over the living room floor, and are convenient to use and buy because of their general availability. Moreover, they do not have to be bought in great quantities as do running cords of wood.

Synthetic brands of fire logs may be convenient but complaints of over-heated fireplaces, excessive cracking or sparking and dangerous flaring have been received by both the Consumer's Association of Canada and the department of consumer and corporate affairs.

These hazards are primarily due to consumers who either fail to read or do not follow the instructions on the wrapper. Synthetic fire logs do have some inherent limitations but are safe when used according to manufacturer's instructions.

Major safety problems will arise if the log is poked or broken up. Synthetic fire logs do not need the attention usually given to regular wood fires. By breaking up the fire log, the additional surfaces exposed to the air only increase the size of the flame.

Only one synthetic fire log may be burned at a time. If two or more are burned together, an excessively hot fire will result, which under certain draught conditions, could go out of control. Never combine synthetic logs with wood. This causes the fire log to break, increasing the size of the flame.

Most manufacturers suggest that the fire logs can be put out using water, sand or a chemical extinguisher. Whichever method you use, make sure you use lots. Small amounts of water thrown on the fire simply makes it flare and burn more fiercely.

Fire logs are safe when they are used correctly. Keep these points in mind when buying and using:

DO: Read the instructions on the wrapping. Be sure the fireplace damper is open and the flue is clean. Place the log on a grate. Use a fireplace screen.

DON'T: Buy or use broken logs. Add a fire log to a wood fire. Burn more than one fire log at a time.

A cheaper alternative to either wood logs or manufactured fire logs are those made from rolled newspapers. The simplest method is to roll newspapers tightly around a stick the width of a broom handle a section at a time, then fasten the rolls with a length of twine or wire.

To make the log hold together longer, soak the paper overnight in soapy water than roll it onto the stick. Withdraw the stick and let the log dry for two or three weeks.

Commercial "log rollers" are also available. They cost about $15-$20 and work on the same principle as hand rolling. They are more convenient and faster if you are into a mass production and storing up for a long winter seige.

A safety guideline to follow with any type of fire — douse it well with water before you to go to sleep or leave the house. Also, make sure the damper is open. There's nothing worse than a house full of smoke — and it spreads rapidly.

Show Your Love

DEAR ABBY: I notice that readers sometimes ask you to print a letter again, but is there any one that has been requested more than any other? — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: The big all-time winner was signed "TOO LATE" and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat at home alone, loving me just the same.

It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them.

I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have their parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think. — TOO LATE

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion that really works for people who are bothered by obscene telephone calls:

The minute you hear an obscene word, say, "Just a moment please," and walk away from the phone without hanging up. The caller will think you are coming back, but when he waits and waits and you don't return, he will tire of waiting and hang up. He can't break the connection because your phone is off the hook. This will make it impossible for the caller to use his phone to harass other women. Also, he will never want to call you again and be deprived of his depraved fun. — OFF THE HOOK

DEAR OFF: Your suggestion will work, but while punishing the caller you are also depriving yourself of the use of your phone. Ma Bell recommends that you hang up immediately, and if the calls continue, to call the police who will underttake certain surveillance procedures in cooperation with the phone company.

It seems to me that the wisest course of action would be to keep your caller's line connected to yourrs (by not hanging up) and then go to a neighbor's phone to report the obscene call to both the phone company and the police.

DEAR ABBY: I was married to Jim eight years ago. We had two sons, then we were divorced. Two years later Jim married my younger sister. They had twin daughters.

My question: Are my sons and my sister's twin daughters just first cousins? Or are they more closely related? — NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: Your sons and your sister's twin daughters are first cousins. But because they have the same father, they are half-brothers and sisters, which is a closer relationship.

½ cup honey
1⅓ cups shredded or flaked coconut
½ tsp. vanilla

In saucepan, over low heat, melt butter; stir in honey, coconut, and vanilla until well combined. When cake (13x9x2-inch) is finished cooking, remove from oven. Turn oven control to broil. Spread prepared honey mixture over cake. Broil topping until golden (approx. 2 minutes).

Saint Laurent Sets the Pace

By SUZY PATTERSON

PARIS (AP) — Paris is going all romantic for next summer's fashions, with Yves Saint Laurent leading the way. He showed a stunning collection to some of the world's most beautiful people at the Crillon Hotel.

The show was really wearable Saint Laurent, going from trouser suits to more and more ruffles. Even the trouser blouses had ruffled and bowed little Pierrot collars under boxy jackets. The same look came up in suits with easy gathered skirts, ruffles peeping under the jacket sleeves. While these came in various bright colors, the Pierrot trouser suit in black and white or all white is bound to be popular.

Ruffles went all over the place in afternoon looks, on soft georgette crepe dresses at the neckline, on sleeves, two or three times on a tiered skirt for a peplum effect at the waist. Skirts for daytime were all below knee length.

Smocking, flounces and big billowy skirts gave some dresses a little-girl romantic look, while others were loaded with lace and ribbons, dripping in multicolors from shoulders, tied at billowing full sleeves, or tied neatly at the waist. The waist is still wasp-sized.

From the soft look, which was often done in combinations of Persian silk prints and striped chiffons, or transparent black or white chiffon edged with guipure lace, the mood moved on to a sort of Victorian garden party.

We showed huge taffeta skirts with petticoats, ruffed 'choker' collars tied with bows, big flowered hats, sometimes a huge fringed shawl. Colors ranged from rose and white through acid green, amethyst purple, brick red.

The Saint Laurent gypsy turned up again, with fringed or feathered stoles in the brightest of colors contrasted with various prints in blouse and flounced skirt.

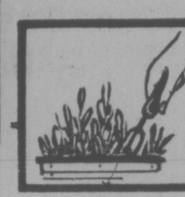
MINI FIZZIES

PARIS (UPI) — The idea of a mini-skirt comeback fizzled out here at the spring-summer high fashion collections presented by the Paris haute couture houses.

Although miniskirts were present, they were shown in a sort of half-hearted way in the form of bloomers and stashed away beneath voile and silk skirts that came just above or just below the knee.



indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

For centuries one of the most beloved of domestic plants, Ivy, is the subject of countless legends that entwine in its history.

According to Greek mythology a dancer named Cissos performed at a feast of the gods with such abandon that she fell dead at the feet of Dionysus, the god of wine. Dionysus transformed her body into ivy, with which the Greeks thereafter used to crown the victors in sports competitions.

In folklore, ivy is often associated with love and luck. If it grows with profusion on a maiden's grave, an old American tale holds that the girl died of love. If it refuses to grow on a grave, the soul is unhappy in its new home. In Wales, the death of an ivy plant was thought to foreshadow the owner's loss of his house.

On a more practical level, we recommend keeping your ivy happy by placing it in a bright window, in the coolest part of your home. Water enough to keep damp, and mist regularly. Most ivy with the exception of the grape ivy, prefers to grow outdoors. It's not impossible to have a happy ivy indoors, just difficult. But with such a history, they have a right to be tempermental.

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Please discuss Crohn's disease. What is it, what causes it, and can it be cured? — Mrs. M.J.H., Wash.

DEAR MRS. H.: Crohn's disease, or ileitis, is an inflammatory disease which affects the lower part of the small intestine. It is named after the physician who first described it.

The condition came into prominence when President Eisenhower was stricken with it.

The exact cause is unknown. What is unusual about this gastro-intestinal disorder is its resemblance to many other intestinal conditions. Chronic ulcerative colitis is one of them.

The diagnosis is usually made by X-ray examination of the lower bowel.

Sometimes a single attack treated actively, with antibiotics and cortisone, may be the last attack. In other instances, recurrences are possible.

Only when there is a severe complication, such as intestinal obstruction, is surgery required.

Does the size of the soft spot on top of the head of a newborn baby affect the child in any way? — Mrs. K.N., Mo.

DEAR MRS. N.: Healthy newborn infants have two soft areas on their skulls. These covered openings are called fontanelles. They remain until the process of bony growth of the skull closes them.

These soft areas are really remarkably tough. A thick membrane covers the brain tissue and acts as an excellent protection against injury.

Parents of newborns, especially with the first-born, are afraid to look at these soft spots, let along touch them. With normal, gentle handling, infants are sturdier than these new parents suspect.

Speaking of Your Health . . . The drinking man's diet has long since been discarded as a recommended way of losing weight. A sage wisely said that this diet eventually produces merely a "fat drunkard."

The Formula

DOG AND CAT COAT DRESSING

The general health of humans and animals can frequently be determined by the condition of the hair. Oil glands supply moisture to the strands, which can be excessive and result in an unattractive appearance. Frequent shampooing is essential to remove excess oil that has collected dust and dirt. But some additional oil should then be replaced to dress the coat and provide a neat appearance. Here's a formula for dog and cat coat dressing that we use on our animals with good results.

You'll need one and one-half cups white mineral oil and one-half cup pine oil (available at a hardware store). Mix these ingredients together and apply to coat, working well.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it —listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Brothel Closure

BANGKOK (Reuter) — Thailand's police director-general, Monchai Punkongkhuen, said Thursday that all the country's brothels must be closed by Feb. 15. The closure is in line with the cleanup policy of the military government which took power last Oct. 6.

Whisky Remains Trapped Behind Pickets

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The question of what will happen to about 17 million gallons of liquor remains unanswered Thursday following the announcement that the Seagram distillery here had been sold to a development company.

The liquor has been trapped behind picket lines at the distillery for more than two years in a dispute between Seagrams and the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union.

The sale of the 73-year-old property to Abacus Cities Ltd. does not include the liquor and Seagram president Mel Griffin said arrangements will have to be made to remove it.

Keith Sheedy, union spokesman, said Thursday, however: "Sold or not sold, that whisky stays in there until there is a collective agreement for an ongoing operation for our members."

Abacus Cities Ltd. plans to redevelop the property for commercial warehouse and residential use.

Griffin said the sale ends speculation that the plant would eventually reopen, but Sheedy said the union is scheduled to continue new talks with the company next week.

Seagram products have not been on liquor store shelves in B.C. since shortly after the shutdown began Feb. 26, 1975.

It is estimated the liquor in the distillery would fill 108.8 million 25-ounce bottles and bring in about $800 million when sold.

Kitimat Pipe Plan Doubles Spill Risk

VANCOUVER (CP) — There will be two major oil ports on the West Coast if the proposed Kitimat pipeline is built, thereby doubling the risk of oil spills, says the former chairman of the B.C. Energy Commission.

Andrew Thompson said that if the National Energy Board approves the application by Kitimat Pipeline Ltd. to build a 750-mile oil pipeline beween Kitimat in Northwestern B.C. and Edmonton, a major oil port will also have to be built in Washington State because there are no plans in the application to serve the needs of B.C. or Washington.

"The State of Washington and B.C. share the same doorway to the Pacific Ocean through the Strait of Juan de Fuca and this fact of geography means that the alternatives we assess must include the needs of refineries in the Puget Sound," Thompson said in a lecture sponsored by the Committee for an Independent Canada.

Thompson, University of B.C. law professor, said the need for crude oil in Washington has been increasing since 1975 when Canada began to curtail export of Alberta crude.

He urged the provincial government to ask the NEB to delay public hearings on the Kitimat pipeline for at least one year while the province defines its position. He also said an inquiry commission should be set up to assess the pipeline proposal and study the relative merits of alternative pipeline systems.

Cable Sale Queried

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission Thursday concluded three days of hearings highlighted by argument that the commission does not have the legal power to render a decision on an application by two cable television companies to sell their holdings to Maclean-Hunter Cable TV to Toronto.

The argument — in the form of a motion — came from Ottawa lawyer Andrew Roman, acting for the Canadian Broadcasting League. The commission reserved decision on the motion and continued the hearings.

Western Cablevision Ltd. and M.S.A. Cablevision Ltd., which serve 57,000 subscribers in Surrey, New Westminster, Langley, Abbotsford and Clearbrook, asked the commission for permission to sell to Maclean-Hunter for $6,750,000 cash, plus assumption by Maclean-Hunter of existing debt of $1,800,000.

Most objections filed with the commission dealt with the concentration of media ownership in fewer hands.

STUN-GUN ACCUSED TO FACE TRIAL

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Howard Victor Ross, 58, of West Vancouver, elected trial by judge Thursday when he appeared in provincial court on charges resulting from an incident in which a man was shot by an electrical stun-gun.

The judge ordered a ban on publication of evidence when the preliminary hearing began. Ross is charged with wounding and possession of a prohibited weapon. He was originally charged with attempted murder.

Harold Thielmann, 40, of nearby Port Coquitlam was shot twice Oct. 16 by darts that delivered a 50,000-volt electrical charge.

4% B.C. Growth Forecast

VANCOUVER (CP) — Real growth in British Columbia's gross provincial product will be about four per cent this year, about the same as that expected for Canada, senior executives of the Bank of Montreal predicted Thursday.

M. Eugene Nesmith, senior vice-president, B.C. division, told the bank's annual outlook seminar that this year's performance will be below the estimated five-per-cent growth in 1976.

Most visible improvement this year should be lumber exports because of an expected increase of about 500,000 United States housing starts, but John E. Toten, the bank's senior economist, said higher labor costs in B.C. might blunt some of the increased U.S. demand.

Replying to a question, Toten said the rest of Canada could be facing an easier year than B.C. in labor negotiations and because of this he is cautious about making predictions for B.C.

The bank's forecast for Canada in based on the expectation that monetary policy will become less restrictive during the year.

The gross national product, the value of goods and services, should rise 3.5 per cent from last year, bank officials said, and gains of 4.5 per cent should be seen in consumer spending and the real value of exports.

Capital spending by industry is expected to decline 3.5 per cent to 1974 levels and outlays on housing could be down seven per cent.

Toten predicted an average increase in consumer prices of about five per cent.

Keep Labor Code —Trades Council

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council has told Labor Minister Allan Williams that it wants to see the provincial Labor Code retained essentially as it is.

In a 17-page brief to Williams, the council specifically warned that any weakening of union security or legislative acceptance of right-to-work policies "would evoke a strong reaction from construction employees and their unions."

But the council advocated changes in legislation to grant construction workers certification on a geographical basis rather than as employees of a particular employer.

Council secretary-treasurer Roy Gauthier said Wednesday the brief was well received by Williams during a 90-minute meeting in his office.

He said Williams gave council representatives some assurances on issues raised in the brief and told them there are currently no plans for drastic changes in the code.

The brief noted that some "vocal and active segments of the community" have advocated elimination of union security guarantees, representation votes on all applications for certification and other changes to the code and added that the council is unequivocally opposed to such changes.

"It has long been recognized that in order to make the concerted employee action meaningful unions should be exclusive bargaining agents and that the majority selecting union representation could also require union participation and support by fellow employees," the brief said.

"To reverse this widely accepted position would undermine the central purpose of collective bargaining legislation and the labor code."

Judge Mulls AIB Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz reserved decision Thursday in a B.C. Supreme Court suit to have the federal government's anti-inflation measures declared illegal in B.C.

The chief justice said he would consider the outcome of a similar Manitoba case soon to go before the Supreme Court of Canada, in deciding the suit.

The Manitoba case deals with the question of federal law superseding provincial law, one of several issues involved in the B.C. case.

The B.C. Teachers Federation, Burnaby Teachers Association and a Burnaby teacher are seeking a declaration that an agreement the B.C. government signed in June, 1976, with Ottawa to bring federal anti-inflation laws into the province was invalid because the agreement was not approved by the provincial legislature.

They also claim that the Anti-Inflation Board had no right to roll back teachers salaries for 1976, which by provincial law, had to be set by Dec. 31, 1975.

Police Threats Forced Lies, Murder Trial Witness Says

NANAIMO (CP) — A defence witness in a murder trial testified Thursday that he originally lied to police because they threatened him and his wife if he did not give evidence to convict, the defendant.

Russell Mutter was testifying at the trial of John David Ross, 34, charged with murder in the fatal shooting of Malcolm Preston Cunningham, 23, killed Nov. 1, 1975, near Victoria.

Mutter testified Wednesday that an earlier crown witness, Rodney Steigenberger, confessed to him that he (Steigenberger) had shot Ross.

Mr. Justice William Craig asked Mutter Thursday why he took so long to completely reverse evidence he gave police shortly after the murder.

Mutter said that his statement to police in December, 1975, was almost a complete fabrication. He said he tried to tell police they were wrong in their investigations concerning Ross, but "they wouldn't believe me."

He said he made up a story because "they (police) were there (at his house) every day, two or three times a day . . . to get them off my back."

Mutter said that Cathy Connally, the woman with whom he lived, told him RCMP constable Wayne Dew told her she had better make sure his testimony would convict Ross or "he would beat her pretty little face in."

Mutter testified that an officer visited their home and told her if she did not make him testify so Ross would be convicted, the officer would make sure a vigilante squad of Cunningham's relatives would know her address so she and her child would be in danger.

Mutter said he once was awakened by police, one of whom held a 12-gauge shotgun to his neck, saying "make one fast move and I'll blow your head off."

He said the officer kept the gun at his neck while he ran him out of the house to a squad car.

Another reason he lied to police, said Mutter, was that he was told that unless he made a statement, he would be charged with the murder and would be kept in custody without bail.

In his original statement, Mutter had said Ross borrowed a .30-calibre rifle from him, shot Cunningham, came to his home to tell about it, then took him and Steigenberger to the murder scene where the three moved the body.

Mutter said the entire story was concocted, and that the true story was as he testified Thursday — that Steigenberger had the rifle, used it on Cunningham while another crown witness, Gordon Caldwell, was present, and those two burned the rifle stock and melted the metal parts with a cutting torch.

Mutter said he first learned of the killing Nov. 3, 1975, and then he and Steigenberger went to the Victoria police station that day to report that the .30-calibre rifle, which he had loaned to Steigenberger, was stolen.

Mutter denied a suggestion by Crown counsel that the theft report was filed Nov. 2.

The trial continues.

Vancouver Hazard Created By Small-Boat Fishermen

VANCOUVER (CP) — The harbor master of the port of Vancouver said Thursday that salmon fishermen in small boats are creasting a hazard in the port's shipping lanes.

Captain A. M. Ross said in a news release that masters of two sea-going ships that docked in Vancouver Sunday filed complaints about the careless behavior of small fishing boats in the traffic lanes. Capt. Ross said he was told that close to 200 small craft were fishing in the general area Sunday.

Fishermen have been attracted by an unusually fine run of winter salmon.

Reporting 'Sloppy'

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS (CP) — Deputy Attorney-General Davis Vickers said Thursday that sloppy newspaper reporting and shallow thinking by readers was responsible for the recent controversy over a government directive to drop minor charges which have been before the courts more than six months.

Vickers told the mid-winter meeting of the British Columbia council of the Canadian Bar Association that crown prosecutors were not told uncatergorically to drop all cases.

"The directive says that they (prosecutors) should look at all 180-day cases and if you still can't proceed then you should drop them," he said. "Our hope is to be able to say in a few months' time that no case in the system over 180 days is there because of a mistake made by the Crown (in not being able to proceed).

"We don't intend to take cases out of the system that normally wouldn't come out," he said.

Shotgun Fatality

HOPE (CP) — RCMP said Thursday that a 35-year-old man whose body was found near the Hope-Princeton highway during the weekend appears to have died from a shotgun blast to the chest. Dental records are being checked to determine the man's identity.

Guards Charged

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Summonses were issued for four guards Thursday after British Columbia Penitentiary prisoner Ronald Miller, 22, asked a provincial court judge if he could swear informations charging them with assault. Miller was appearing on an assault charge that resulted from a 5½-hour hostage-taking incident. The guards are to appear in court Feb. 11.

Prompt Payment

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Life Underwriters' Association of Vancouver said Thursday it is pleased with the provincial government's decision to remove gift taxes and succession duties. The action will permit life insurance companies to pay full proceeds of policies promptly the association said in a statement.

Northern Role Urged for Jails

OTTAWA (CP) — The North could become an ideal place of imprisonment because it is escape-proof and men could be put to work there with little restraint, Dr. Tad Grygier, a Polish-born criminologist who spent a year in a Siberian prison, said Thursday.

"I think the proposition is quite feasible," he told Bruce Halliday (PC—Oxford), a member of a Commons subcommittee looking into the federal prison syste, Grygier put before the committee a "social protection code" in which imprisonment would be a last resort and would mean productive work. The centre of the new prisons would be a factory or training place similar to those in Russia or Poland.

Halliday asked whether the Grygier system could be experimented with in the North. Grygier, sent to the Gulag Archipelago in 1940 by the Russians, said "from personal experience" that it could.

"Such a system does not have to be corrupt," he said. "We do not have to send political prisoners there. We have no political prisoners. It may help develop the North. And there is no question of escaping from there."

The only secure place for a prisoner in the North would be the prison centre and its "warmth, food, work." Walls wouldn't be needed.

"It isn't just Ottawa that is failing," he said of the present correctional system. The provinces, Washington and London were failing too.

Rehabilitation, on which their prison systems were based, was no longer regarded as feasible and there was a return to retribution.

Grygier, who teaches at the University of Ottawa, said prisons are essential "whether we like it or not." They were the alternative to parole and other forms of release.

John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) said he doubted whether Canadian prisoners would work. They didn't work on the street. Grygier said the answer would be to make prison tough — no television, no movies — for non-workers.

In Poland a non-worker in prison could expect "a knife in his back" for not contributing to the welfare of the prisoners, he said.

Drinking Warning

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department will soon start a $500,000 advertising campaign to warn drinking drivers that the risks of being caught are increasing, says G. D. Campbell, a department official.

Campbell, road safety director, said that the two-month campaign will inform motorists of changes to the Criminal Code last year on alcohol breathalyzer tests. The advertisements will appear in newspapers and television and radio.

The legal impairment level of blood-alcohol concentration is .08 milligrams per 100 millitres of blood.

NO CHARGESEX

MONTREAL (CP) — Officials of two credit-card organizations said Thursday their cards were never used by massage-parlor clients to pay for sexual favors.

They were reacting to testimony before the Quebec police commission inquiry into organized crime. Police officers told the inquiry they found a credit-card machine during a raid at a massage parlor which was alleged to have been a front for prostitution.

Gov't Blacklist 'Like Nixon'

By IAIN HUNTER

OTTAWA — An Opposition MP accused Solicitor-General Francis Fox Thursday of taking the attitude of former U.S. president Richard Nixon in refusing to talk about the "black-list" of civil servants branded leftist revolutionaries.

Ged Baldwin (PC — Peace River) tried in vain in the Commons to get Fox to inform people on the list of the so-called Extra-Parliamentary Opposition that they are identified in this way so that they may be given an opportunity to sue the government for criminal libel.

Despite the fact that Frank Oberle (PC — Prince George-Peace River) read the entire letter, written by former Solicitor-General Jean Perrre Goyer in 1971, into the record of the House Wednesday, Fox refused to discuss it or even recognize its existence.

"If anyone wishes to talk about the disclosure of the contents of a possible letter between ministers he must take complete responsibility for it and for possibly affecting the reputation of some persons if that occurs, which I do not believe is the case," he declared.

"This responsibility will fall on those who decide to release certain information that was of a confidential nature," he added.

"That's what Nixon said," snapped Baldwin.

He argued that the letter, designed for circulation among five cabinet ministers of the day, and urging that those named be "watched with more than normal care" by their superiors, appears to justify laying charges of criminal libel.

"Members of the government have no more right than anyone else to conceal evidence," Baldwin declared.

New Democratic Party house leader Stanley Knowles also urged that those named on the list be notified on a confidential basis so that they can take action to have their names cleared.

He also urged the solicitor-general to ensure that there is nothing on the files of the civil servants named to the effect that they were included — even if it meant destroying the list itself.

Fox insisted that there is no such list in circulation.

However, on Wednesday, he admitted that it and the list are still on file in the government departments to which they were sent by Goyer.

CIGGIE PUFFERS GROWING FEWER

OTTAWA (CP) — The percentage of the population who smoke cigarettes regularly is decreasing, the federal health department said Thursday.

"For the total population 15 years of age and over, 37.3 per cent reported they were regular, that is daily, cigarette smokers in 1975 compared to 38.8 per cent in 1974," the department said in a news release.

"For those 20 years and over, the figures were 38.7 and 39.6 per cent for 1975 and 1974 respectively."

The department said most of this decrease is based on the decline in the percentage of males who smoke cigarettes

The department said most of this decrease is based on the decline in the percentage of males who smoke cigarettes regularly.

Cattle Tested

OTTAWA (CP) — More cattle than previously suspected may be infected with bovine leukemia virus, a new, extremely sensitive test developed by a federal veterinarian and four American cancer researchers shows.

Cattle with the virus may develop or transmit a cancer called lymphosarcoma to other animals, and although no transmission to man has been found, researchers are looking into such a possibility.

HOSPITAL IN CRISIS!
THIS IS WRONG!
Stripping the Downtown Hospital of Its Emergency Department, Coronary and Intensive-Care Units and Operating Rooms Will Shrink It to a Dangerous Relic.
SPLITTING THE VICTORIA GENERAL HOSPITAL:
1. WILL WASTE YOUR TAX MONEY
2. WILL LOWER STANDARDS OF PATIENT CARE.
3. WILL BE INEFFICIENT & EXPENSIVE TO RUN.
4. WILL DAMAGE STAFF MORALE.

Inflation Rules Stay: Macdonald

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday the government will stick by present rules governing the anti-inflation program, despite his own declaration that private business needs help.

"I would not envisage any substantial change in the guidelines, either in the wages or profit side, before the end of the prpogram," he told the Commons.

But he reiterated that he is considering a pay and price watchdog agency to take the place of controls once they are lifted.

Questioned by Opposition leader Joe Clark, Mr. Macdonald referred to an agency "expanded on that of the Food Prices Review Board," or similar to the "Council of Wage and Price stability in the United States."

Macdonald also narrowed the date for his next budget to sometime between the end of February and beginning of June.

And, he said the government would hold a major economic conference if it was sure of its success.

In confirming he will push for establishment of a continuing board to monitor wages and prices, Macdonald was again reversing earlier government policy.

In 1973, at the time the Food Prices Review Board was created, the government resisted tremendous pressure to have its terms of reference widened to include non-food items.

There was an earlier experience with a profits monitoring board, in 1969-70, but it was allowed to expire after an attempt at a major economic conference which was boycotted by organized labor.

Government officials say the federal-provincial conference next Tuesday and Wednesday will be largely devoted to discussing the timing and method of ending current income and profit controls, and to post-control monitoring.

Macdonald hinted that a major thrust of his budget will be job creation, and by the private sector.

'DREAMING IN COLOR'

TORONTO (CP) — Talk of compromise between Canadian federalists and the Parti Quebecois is not possible because compromise is a word which does not appear in Quebec Premier Rene Levesque's dictionary, says Liberal Senator Eugene Forsey.

In a letter to The Star, Senator Forsey says the Parti Quebecois is not interested in compromise because their demand for separatism "is not a bargaining position; it is a categorical imperative."

It says the party's talk of an economic association between an independent Quebec and the rest of Canada would involve joint control of tariffs, monetary policy and transcontinental transportation, and this is, "as the Prime Minister has said, 'dreaming in color.' "

The senator's letter says an independent Quebec would demand the common tariff be raised to protect such Quebec industries as textiles.

TAX REFUND DEMANDED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia native Indian is seeking a B.C. Supreme Court declaration that B.C. Hydro does not have the right to impose sales tax on power and light it sells on reserves.

A writ filed Thursday by Lillian Brown also asks for a court order requiring an official accounting to be made to determine how much money hydro already has collected in sales tax from reserve Indians, and an order requiring it to be paid back.

Nuclear Agent Had Option

OTTAWA (CP) — A renegotiation of an agent's fee in the sale of a nuclear reactor to South Korea gave the agent an option to represent Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. if a second reactor is sold to the Asian country, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Thursday.

United Developments Inc. of Tel Aviv received an undertaking to be the agent in a second sale in March of last year, Gillespie told the Commons.

That was when the company agreed at AECL's request to cut $1.6 million from its -20-million flat fee for selling the first reactor and to make part of the funds accountable as expenses.

Ed Broadbent, New Democrat leader, told the House he could not understand why an agent would be needed to promote a second reactor sale if the first reactor proved itself.

A Commons public accounts committee is inquiring into that agreement as well as a second deal involving an agent in a sale to Argentina.

The federal auditor-general says there is insufficient documentation to back $10.5 million of the $17.8 million already paid the agents.

United said in a letter tabled in the committee Thursday that it is willing to provide additional documentation to the auditor-general if he comes to Tel Aviv, but rejected proposals for a full-scale audit of the company's books.

Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell says he wants time to consider the letter from United president Shaul Eisenberg and will reply next Tuesday on whether he still is interested in making the trip.

The committee also decided to send letters to foreign businessmen and government officials seeking more information on the sale to Argentina, which involved an agent's fee of $2.4 million.

AECL paid the money into a Swiss bank account at the request of its partner, Italimpianti of Genoa, but does not know the name of the agent involved.

The letters will ask officials of the Swiss bank, Italimpianti and the Argentina Nuclear Commission to provide additional information in writing or to send witnesses before the committee.

Civil Service Block Cited

OTTAWA (CP) — A parliamentary committee set up to protect taxpayers from unfair government regulations and decrees says senior bureaucrats are obstructing its work.

The 19-member Commons-Senate regulations committee will complain to both houses of Parliament next week that justice department lawyers are making it difficult for the committee to carry out its watchdog duties.

The committee was appointed more than five years ago to keep tabs on the power of the government to make important decisions by cabinet and ministerial order rather than by Parliament-approved legislation.

The 12 MPs and seven senators are ready to have their first detailed report tabled in Parliament next week. They say delays were due largely to an unco-operative civil service.

"There appears to be a growing belief in the civil service that the committee is aimless, and floundering," committee counsel G. C. Eglington wrote in a memorandum to the members.

The committee wants to review more than 14,000 regulations and other statutory instruments that allow cabinet and individual ministers, usually on the advice of senior civil servants, to make decisions without parlimentary approval.

Such regulatory powers affect virtually every area of government including insurance applicants and numerous matters affecting taxation.

It was a cabinet decision, not an act of Parliament, that set an 80-per-cent different editorial content quota and forcing the Canadian edition of Time magazine out of business last March.

The joint committee met privately Thursday, to draft a report charging numerous departments with refusal to cooperate.

Eglington's memo says justice department lawyers in various departments will not disclose the legal opinions on which many regulations were based. It also charges that many departments are "leisurely and dilatory" in their responses to committee requests for information.

Programs Opened

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — A $243 million budget with emphasis on decentralization has been presented to the Northwest Territorial council by commissioner Stuart Hodgson.

In outlining the budget, which covers the fiscal year beginning April 1, he told the 15-member council that government programs would be decentralized.

"It means that more and more funds are being turned over to the control and trust of other groups and it requires improved financial competence in communities and organizations to ensure that funds are being spent in the proper manner."

The administration has begun a series of workshops designed to train people to take over the responsibility for many programs, and 81 persons have participated so far, he said.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It took a finesse and a swindle on South's part to bring home his game contract in today's deal. The hand came up during the 1976 Fall National Championships.

	NORTH
	♡ J 9 4
	◇ 10 9 6 4

	♠ J 8 7 6 4 2
	♡ K Q 10 8
	◇ K 8 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	1 ♠	1 NT	2 ♠
3 ♣	3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

South's bidding was overaggressive but, as will become evident, his play was beyond reproach.

After West had opened a low club, South paused to size up the situation. If the adversely held trumps were divided 2-2, then all South would lose would be one trump trick (by leading the ace of spades and then following up by playing a second spade), one heart and one diamond (if the diamond ace were in the East hand, which it figured to be on the bidding).

Going further, declarer recognized that West, for his no-trump response after South had made his one-spade overcall, surely indicated that West had two or three spades headed by the king or queen.

So, with every intention of playing dummy's ace of spades on the initial spade lead, and then leading a second spade immediately in the hope that the four outstanding spades were divided 2-2, South perpetrated his swindle: he ruffed the opening club lead and promptly laid down the jack of spades. West, evidently fearing that South's spade suit was headed by the K-J, covered with the queen, to make sure that his ten-spot would become the winner. Dummy's ace won the trick — as East's king fell.

On the ace of clubs, South then discarded a diamond, after which he led a trump to his eight. When West declined to win the trick, South led the eight of hearts to dummy's nine. East took his ace and returned a clib, which South ruffed. Next came a heart to dummy's jack, and this was followed by a diamond lead towards his king. South's only losers were a spade, a heart and a diamond.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, January 29

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pressures relieved. You are "more yourself". Means you can act in a more creative, independent manner. Accent on short journey, ideas, relatives and humor. Popularity increases. You are rid of many fears, doubts which plagued you in recent past.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Money picture is brighter than might be imagined. You locate lost object — Aquarian reveals information long sought. Your assets increase in value. Highlight intuition. You sense what is to be — and you are likely to be on target.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle high; take initiative. Make new starts in new directions. Be a self-starter. Highlight personality, bright colors, personal appearances. Another Gemini — and a Sagittarian — could be in picture. Expand — be confident, optimistic and keep in mind recent diet resolutions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some restictions are in picture. Hospitals, clubs, charitable institutions figure prominently. Details are more significant than usual — know it and respond accordingly. Be meticulous, especially where fine print is concerned. Go slow. Deal cautiously with Aquarius, Taurus, Leo persons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Popularity zooms! You could be on roller coaster ride to achievement, prestige, reward, acclaim. Gemini, Virgo individuals play important roles. Scenario has you getting wish fulfilled, capitalizing on good timing, winning heart of one you love — and getting excellent financial deal. Wow!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Adjustment in home area indicated. Purchase of art object may be on agenda. Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently. Accent on promotion, prestige, communication with professional superiors. One in position to promote your best interests in willing to listen. Do something about it!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good Moon aspect coincides now with education, travel, publishing, ability to get views across to more persons in wider areas. Pisces could be involved. Key is to define terms, outline goals, see as is and to get rid of any tendency towards self-deception. News from afar is "good".

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You locate lost objects, recover investment that seemed to have gone "down the drain". Persons who seemed indifferent now could rally behind you. Organize priorities — realize that a relationship is growing in intensity. Don't ignore Capricorn.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lie low — let others show their hands. Play waiting game. Study circumstances; be a keen, shrewd observer. Accent on legal matters, public relations, cooperative efforts, partnership, marital status. You complete major task, ssignment — Aries, Libra could be involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Renewed interest in special project is indicated. Stick to style — and principles. Love is in picture; Leo and Scorpio figure prominently. Moderate pace should be advocated — eschew sensationalism. Health, work, recreation and unique services command attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Favorable Moon aspect relates now to affairs of heart, creative changes, relations with children, speculative ventures. Your natural, intuitive qualities surge to forefront. Another Aquarian — and a Cancer — figure in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be flexible where family plans are concerned. One close to you, with "weight problem", confides desire to travel to skip details. Social life accelerates. Feeling of confinement is at diminishing stage.

IF JANUARY 29th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intuitive, a natural teacher, sensitive to moods and needs of others. Cancer, Aquarius and Leo persons play important roles in your life. August should be your most significant month of 1977, a year which sees you gaining added recognition, finishing a major task, being rid of emotional weight which was not your own to carry in first place.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Roy replaced the telephone receiver. "That was Ted," he said. "You know I drove straight to Bray and back yesterday. Well, he did the same run from Bray to here and back, and we both started at the same time."

"A coincidence," Ann commented. "Did you stay long?"

"Only twenty minutes," Ron replied. "But it's funny that's exactly as long as he stayed here. We passed at the old mill 18 miles from Bray, and then again at the Lea bridge 16 miles from here."

Assuming each maintained a steady speed throughout, how far was it to Bray?

Way Clear for Leiva Return

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Ricardo Leiva says he and his family have airline reservations to return to Canada Feb. 10, and may even be back before then.

The Leivas have been in Spain for the past six months while the Canadian government considered their application for legal entry into the country.

The family fled Chile in 1973 after the overthrow of the Allende government and came to Canada on visitor's permits. Ricardo Leiva and his wife Carmen were working illegally here before they were discovered and voluntarily left for Madrid in July.

Leiva said in a telephone interview from Madrid Thursday that he made reservations on the Feb. 10 flight because he was confident money for the trip would be forthcoming.

Leiva, speaking in Spanish through an interpreter, said officials of the Catholic Immigrant Service in Madrid have promised him an interest-free loan to pay for the family's passage.

However, the loan has not been confirmed, he added.

The family may be able to return earlier than Feb. 10 because the $1,500 needed for air fare was raised in this north-central British Columbia city Wednesday.

When told that money was available here for air tickets, Leiva said he would rather have the tickets sent from Canada than take a loan from the Catholic Immigrant Service.

He said this could mean the family may be able to leave before Feb. 10.

The tickets were being sent to Madrid today by Dave Farah, a friend of the family.

However, it was not known if an earlier flight could be arranged.

Leiva said the family has been living with another Chilean family in Madrid and has one room to itself.

He said his children — Marcia, 10, and Ricardo, 7 — have not attended school since arriving in Madrid six months ago.

On Tuesday, Ted Drage, head of the immigration office here, said the Leivas had been offered an interest-free loan from a religious organization.

He said a message received by his office from Madrid said the loan would provide the Leivas with a 25-per-cent reductuon on air fare.

It also said all paper work was cleared for the Leivas to return to Canada and they could pick up their visas today from the Madrid office.

SKATING WEEKEND

OTTAWA (CP) — Prince Andrew will spend a skating and tobagganning weekend Feb. 4 in Ottawa at the invitation of Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger, Government House announced Thursday.

The prince will be accompanied by two of his classmates from Lakefield College, near Peterborough, where he has begun five months of studies.

Some 200 young people, including sons and daughters of foreign diplomats in Canada, have been invited to the skating party.

Frozen Chicken Saved His Life

TORONTO — Lance Thomson owes his life to a frozen chicken. Thomson, 25, told county court he found an intruder in his apartment one night last July. Before any words were exchanged, the stranger fired one shot at Thomson from a .410-guage shotgun. Most of the pellets lodged in a frozen chicken in a bag of groceries Thomson was holding in front of him. Doctors later removed 71 pellets from Thomson's chest. John Gillis, 25, was found not guilty of attempted murder by reason of insanity and sent to the Penetanguishene mental health facility for treatment.

EDMONTON — Rudy Challfoux, a printer in the Journal's composing room for 19 years, said Thursday he still can't believe he is $50,000 richer. He held ticket 99074 which won the amount Wednesday night in the Western Express lottery draw. "I didn't believe it when my son told me last night and I still don't believe it." He has no immediate plans for his windfall.

OSWEGO, N.Y. — A play that has been criticized by Walt Disney Enterprises because it depicts Mickey Mouse as an alcoholic opens here this week. The one-act play, entitled And They Used To Star In the Movies, was written by Campbell Black, a former teacher at the State University of New York at Oswego, and is set in a sleazy hotel barroom. An aging Mickey Mouse is with Minnie and Donald Duck. While Mickey awaits a phone call regarding a part in an Italian film, Minnie reminisces about love affairs with Bugs Bunny, Popeye and others. Donald complains bitterly about always playing second fiddle. Goofy, Disney's canine cartoon character, is referred to as a hopeless junkie.

ROCHESTER, Minn. — Retired western actor Randolph Scott has been released from the Mayo Clinic after 10 days of tests. Scott, made 180 western and adventure films during his career.

LONDON — Princess Margaret, needed psychiatric help when her marriage to Lord Snowdon began to break up, according to a new book on the Royal family. "Princess Margaret had proved an obsessive wife. Intensely in love with her husband, she smothered him. Her emotional life was keyed to a neurotic pitch. Psychiatric help had to be called in," said Robert Lacy in Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II and the House of Windsor.

HOLLAND Mich. — Former presidential press secretary Ron Nessen says he plans to write a book, do some lecturing and may return to television journalism. Nessen, who was a reporter for NBC News before becoming President Ford's press secretary, said at Hope College Thursday incompetence of some Washington journalists is partially to blame for occasional friction between the White House and the media. "A period of public service would make for better newsmen," Nessen said. "Public service work would allow newsmen to feel what it's like being a participant in history rather than an observer."

BURBANK, Calif. — James Fogelson was arrested for entering a police station. Officers felt he should have left his car outside. Police said Fogelsong, 19, was at the wheel of an auto that jumped a curb and crashed into the door of the station Thursday, smashing through a double glass door and an 8-by-15 foot glass window into the building's lobby.

Fogelsong was booked for drunken driving.

KORFF QUITS NIXON FUND

WASHINGTON — Rabbi Baruch Korff has resigned as head of the President Nixon Justice Fund and been succeeded by Lloyd Johnson, an Ann Arbor, Mich., nursing home operator and long-time supporter of the former chief executive.

In a letter to about 4,000 contributors to the Washington-based fund, which has reported raising $350,000 to help pay Nixon's legal bills, Johnson said the fund will not make public appeals for donations.

Art Is Death on Streets

SEATTLE (AP) — It's art, but it looks like death on the streets.

At your feet is the scrawled outlined of a dead man. A splotch of blood flows from his head.

The outlines of slaying victims are showing up on sidewalks in Seattle and Vancouver. The startling "cop-art" is the work of unknown amateurs, not homicide detectives.

No one knows why the doodles of death have been made.

Passers-by gasp, then step around the painted silhouette of one imaginary sprawled body near Seattle's Pike Place Market. a splotch of red denotes death by head wound.

Other death drawings are almost identical — white paint of a male in baggy pants and shoes, lying face up with the left arm thrust out straight from the shoulder, the right arm upraised from the elbow.

The artist stencils by stealth. After he, she or they slap down the grim artwork, no witnesses come forth. The sidewalks are their canvas. And the public has make-believe bloodshed at its feet every morning.

Seattle and Vancouver police say the grim artwork is not theirs. They have established no clear connection between the United States drawings and the Canadian works.

At least a dozen slaying stencils have turned up in both cities, police say.

The Seattle figures usually bear a red stain in the head area, realistically suggesting a bullet in the temple. Vancouver police say the legend, "It's a Dead Issue" sometimes accompanies the artwork there.

Deloris Tarzan, a Seattle Times art critic, says the sketches have "an expressive, disturbing energy."

She believes the artist is experienced and capable. But the public isn't as sure.

"We've gotten a few calls from people who think there are weird things going on," said Seattle police Detective G. S. Jelberg.

"It could be kids. Who knows? If they gave me the case, I'd go through my nut files and wonder who'd do a thing like that."

In Vancouver, homicide Detective Jack Davis agreed with Jelberg that the death sketches are interesting, but not urgent matters.

"We've got too many real ones to worry about," Davies said. "The only crime the guy committed was defacing a sidewalk."

But the drawings startle. Unlike police who outline real victims with chalk, the amateur sidewalk shockers use paint that doesn't wash off in rain. Some drawings are said to have been around since last spring.

Viet-Vet Job Hunt Launched

WASHINGTON (WP) — Just hours after he was sworn in, Labor Secretary F. Ray Marshall Thursday announced a $1.3 billion, three-point program to find both private and public service jobs for more than 200,000 of the nation's 558,000 unemployed "Vietnam-era" veterans.

Marshall called the 8.6 per cent unemployment rate for male "Vietnam-era" veterans aged 20-34 a "blight on the nation's conscience," and said President Jimmy Carter will "approach the chief executive officers of most of the major American corporations to request their support . . ."

He said he didn't know whether the program would blunt sharp criticism of Carter's pardon for draft evaders voiced by some veterans' groups. But he said he'd worked extensively with veterans' groups to draft the jobs program, and he thinks they will support it.

Carter ordered him to give top priority to the problem during his first meeting with his cabinet appointees on St. Simons Island the week before Christmas, Marshall said.

He is most concerned about the disabled and black unemployed veterans, the "hardest hit of all," Marshall said.

CONSUMERS IGNORING U.S. SAFETY RECALLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years ago the U.S. government ordered 427,000 color television sets recalled because of possible radiation "from five to 25 times the maximum allowable."

Today, despite widespread publicity and two letters sent to owners by the manufacturer, records show that more than 60 per cent of the sets in the hands of consumers never have been brought in for repairs.

No one knows how many of those potentially hazardous sets still are producing fine pictures while possibly leaking potentially hazardous levels of radiation.

Yet this recall, one of the largest in history, had a higher success ratio than most such government orders.

The consumer pays nothing for the repairs, yet the government has had only limited success in removing possible hazardous merchandise from consumers.

The consumer product safety commission orders more recalls than any other government agency. Only about 19 per cent of the 33 million individual products recalled in the commission's four-year history have been returned for repairs.

Some recalled items have been so inexpensive that federal officials believe many owners simply threw them away rather than returning them to manufacturers for repair.

However, the effectiveness of recalls for expensive items, such as color television sets and automobiles, has not been high either. A study by the General Accounting Office found that only 34 per cent of the 19 million vehicles ordered recalled by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration because of possible safety defects have been returned for repairs.

PURSE THIEVES RECANT

SEATTLE (UPI) — Carol Erickson is an angry and gutsy housewife who turned a purse snatch into a profit-making experience.

Mrs. Erickson got off a downtown bus when three men crowded around her and bumped her several times. Mrs. Erickson found her wallet missing.

When a nearby cab driver refused to call police, the woman deposited her year-old daughter with a "kindly looking" man standing nearby and chased the purse snatchers.

When she caught up to them, Mrs. Erickson yelled at one: "Hey, turkey. Give me my money back!"

One pulled out a roll of bills and asked how much she had lost. Mrs. Erickson grabbed the roll from his hand and the three men fled.

She retrieved her daughter and then counted the bills, which came to $29. That was $8 more than she remembered having in her wallet.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration has ordered a review of U.S. efforts to halt the spread of nuclear weapons amid indications of a tougher position on the issue from the White House and state department.

Among the items to be considered are U.S. efforts to block or modify the West German sale to Brazil of a nuclear fuel reprocessing plant, which would be capable of manufacturing weapons material from used nuclear fuel.

The German-Brazilian deal was among the subjects discussed by Vice-President Walter Mondale and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on Tuesday in Bonn, and is the topic of continuing discussions between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Peter Hermes, a senior official of the West German Foreign Ministry.

The Ford administration also opposed Germany's sale of reprocessing technology and equipment to Brazil, though some of its opposition evidently was only for form's sake.

Then-secretary of state Henry A. Kissinger supposedly protested the sale in a meeting with German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher in June 1975.

U.S. Praises Sakharov

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. state department, in a new surge of outspokenness on human rights, admonished the Soviet Union Thursday against attempts "to intimidate" leading Russian dissident Andrei Sakharov.

"We have long admired Andrei Sakharov as an outspoken champion of human rights in the Soviet Union." said the state department in lauding the physicist and Nobel Peace Prize laureate.

Sakharov was summoned to the Soviet prosecutor's office in Moscow on Tuesday and warned that he faces criminal charges unless he ceases "hostile and slanderous" activities.

Report on WCB 'Vindictive'

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

A government report on the Workers' Compensation Board is destructive, vindictive and superficial, the former chairman of the board says in a report made public Thursday.

Terry Ison, chairman of the WCB from mid-1973 to January, 1976, labels the authors of the government-commissioned P. S. Ross and Co. report as incompetent and unqualified, says Labor Minister Allen Williams has made the post of chairman look suicidal and calls the Employers Council of B.C, a slick public relations organization not interested in the safety and health of workers.

The P. S. Ross report on the organization of the WCB was commissioned by Williams the same time Ison was fired last January.

Ison had already handed in his resignation and intended to leave the post in June, 1976, but Williams fired him before that.

The Ross report was highly critical of both Ison and the WCB, saying Ison had an almost all-powerful role and that the board seemed to roll along on its own without budgeting or planning.

Ison says in his own report on the report that the Ross consultants never saw the board operating as a going concern. They were brought in, he says, on the scene of a leaderless organization that was under attack by the "most powerful lobby in the province," (the Employers' Council).

The Ross consultants never talked to Ison and there is no way they could make an adequate survey of the operation in the short time they took.

"One reason for my lack of enthusiasm in writing this report is that there are far more productive things on which I would rather spend my time than in commenting on a report that is superficial, replete with factual errors and logical fallacies and in other respects incompetently done," Ison says.

At one point in his report, Ison says the Ross consultants seem "overcome by sadistic irony."

Williams has made the position of WCB chairman look suicidal, Ison says, by "delivering a gratuitous insult and financial loss to a public servant and in so doing, took the risk of jeopardizing the prospects of obtaining a new chairman of high qualifications and ability."

Since firing Ison, Williams has not hired a new chairman. He has been saying since the Ross report was released in early December that he expects to make an announcement "in a few days" and said this week the list of candidates has been narrowed to two.

Ison says Williams made a decision that made it clear throughout the WCB that job security at senior levels depends on appeasing the Employers' Council rather than reaching decisions by reference to the law of the province.

The Employers' Council was critical of Ison all the time he held the post of chairman.

He says in the report that the WCB was set up to benefit injured workers, not for the convenience of the employers' council.

"The demands of the Employers' Council were usually expressed in police terms, and prefaced by expressions of concern for the well-being of workers," he says.

"It was a smooth PR approach aimed at maintaining smooth labor relations by glossing over any conflicts of interest that may exist. But looking through the veneer at the substance of their demands, they were inconsistent with the health of working people and small employers. . . ."

Ison says the role of WCB chairman must be powerful to resist the advances of the Employers' Councill.

If he had been less strong, he says, "it would have resulted in a transfer of power from the chairman to the Employers' Council."

Ison also accuses the Ross consultants of being nothing more than a "recording secretary" for the positions of the Employers' Council.

Ison suggests in his report that Williams issue a public statement disassociating the government from the Ross report and see if he can find a new chairman and "give him the authority to get on with it."

Squatters Ruled Off M-B Land

Five squatters were given 30 days Thursday to vacate land near Shawnigan Lake after MacMillan Bloedel was granted a B.C. Supreme Court injunction.

The order by Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan compels Fred Anderson, his brother Peter, mother Ella, Richard Houle and Heather Cousins to remove their possessions from a parcel of land described as Block 932 of the Helmcken District, containing 8,342 acres near Wild Deer Creek, 10 miles south of Duncan and nine miles west of Shawnigan.

They are prevented from re-entering the 8,342-acre property or from its future use, except to exercise in good faith their rights under the Mineral Act, for which they may apply to the court for relief from the injunction.

Fred Anderson, who conducted most of his own argument, was granted an adjournment to next Thursday to permit representation by Douglas Christie, who entered a valid free miner's certificate in evidence.

Anderson said he had held a prospector's certificate since 1968, and Christie maintained this entitled the defendants to use the property.

He said to prevent them from re-entering the lands would contravene the Mineral Act, which provides free entry to any lands on which the precious metal rights are held by the Crown, and to locate and prospect for these minerals.

Ruttan said it required no expert knowledge to see whether any legitimate mining or prospecting had been carried out, referring to the prospector's licence as "a device to acquire squatter's rights to this property."

David Williams, counsel for the plaintiffs, said the company did not object to prospectors, but only to the setting up of "permanent encampments and staying for years."

He said the defendants had built fences, a log cabin, barn, planted gardens and were running a horse on the property.

ARSONIST SUSPECTED

Arson is suspected in a fire that caused about $2,000 damage to Metro Toyota body shop, 3130 Napier Lane, Thursday night.

A Victoria fire department spokesman said the fire broke out in a garbage bin at the rear of the building and spread up one wall. It was reported by a passer-by at 6:34 p.m.

Guerrillas Killed

LA PLATA, Argentina (Reuter) — Security patrols shot and killed four Peronist Montonero guerrillas caught painting slogans Thursday in this Buenos Aires provincial capital, police sources said.

Check Tubers for Firmness

With the end of January in sight, the home gardener who has saved begonia tubers from last year will be wondering about starting them into growth again.

Before setting a date, first check the tubers. If ripened well last fall and stored in dry sand until now in a cool temperature (2 to 4 deg. C.) there should still be no sign of growth.

See that the tubers are firm to the touch, and heavy for their size. This delicate assessment of weight in relation to size is the home gardener's guide to excellence in all dormant bulbs and tuberous roots. It denotes solidity, and together with firmness to gentle pressure, indicates bulbs and tubers to be in good condition. They can be left until mid February before restarting. Daylight will then be stronger and growth more sturdy.

Stored in warmer conditions, begonia tubers maybe found to have light green knobby buds on the surface now. The dished, or convex, side is the upper surface or top of a begonia tuber (and an anemone tuber too, by the way). The smoother, rounder side is the down or root side.

When growth buds are seen to be forming it is time to set the tubers into a shallow pan of damp peatmoss. The dampness and a temperature between 10 and 13 deg. C. will encourage roots to form.

Don't cover the top of the tubers but have the peatmoss well up around the sides. The aim is to have a good root system form on each tuber and later an inch or so of sturdy top growth. Keep the pan of tubers in strong daylight and occasional sun; maintain a dampness in the peatmoss but not a sogginess.

In a month or more, tubers will be ready for potting into four-inch pots where they remain until reaching the final flowering place.

Tuberous begonias are the ideal flowering plant for ornamental pots on patio, balcony or sundeck since in all these areas there is likely to be either the broken sunlight or partial shade the plants must have.

They are not adapted to indoor growing. They thrive on air, overhead light, a moist atmosphere, yet not the heat of summer sun on flowers or foliage. Native to tropical areas where they grow in jungle conditions, begonias make little headway until temperatures reach 16 deg. C. But rooting takes place at the lower temperatures suggested — 10 to 13 deg. C.

Given an early start in rooting indoors, it is possible in our coastal climate to have splendid stocky plants with lustrous leaves and gorgeously colored blooms when they spend the summer months outdoors. The flowers constantly appear from early July until late November if fall frosts are absent.

When buying new tubers, try to get them as soon as they become available. If you leave your buying until you are thinking of planting them outdoors, the tubers will have gradually lost their moisture content and certainly they will be hard to get into good growth. Plan how you will take care of them from the time you buy until finally putting the started plants outdoors.

Begonia tubers need the long slow patience of a contented home gardener, who knows the results of patience from experience. The results are spectacular.

SAMUEL McCLURE

Located in South Fairfield, this 4-bedroom home has retained all its charm and grace. You'll enjoy its 3200 sq. ft. with grand entrance hall, formal dining room, smoking room and master bedroom with fireplace and dressing room. All of the stained glass and brass fixtures are intact and all services have been updated. A legal suite is nearing completion in the full high basement. $92,500.

WATERFRONT

On almost half-acre of ocean front in South Oak Bay, this impressive home is one of Victoria's landmarks. Built in 1908, it is one of McClure's finest. Currently, it is used as 3 deluxe suites, but has been done to facilitate conversion back to a 5 bedroom, 3 bath home. The grounds are immaculate with formal rose gardens and meandering paths to the sea. A once-in-a-lifetime opportunity at $159,500. 4 Bedrms.

4 yrs. old but nicer than new throughout, 2 levels professionally finished. There's a lovely brick FP in living rm., the dinette has sundeck access. There are 3 bedrms. main fl. and a very large 4th at lower level, both the 4-pce. on main fl. and the 2-pcer. down are attractive, and like new. There's a nice TV rm., and a games room with snooker table workshop and a tastefully designed bar for entertaining. In a nice location where you're not boxed in, not a thing needs fixing or refinishing. Just set down your furniture and put your feet up.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Don't Jail Blacks—Report

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — A government commission has recommended that blacks should no longer be jailed for offences under South Africa's pass laws, the cause of about 500,000 prosecutions each year.

The commission was appointed in 1974 to look into the penal system and was headed by Judge Gerrit Viljoen.

It said in its report that convictions under the pass laws, which restrict freedom of movement by blacks, were the main cause for the overpopulation of South African prisons.

In the year ending June 30, 1974, 511,163 blacks were prosecuted for offences under the pass laws. The numbers of those jailed are not available but they form a large percentage of the short-term offenders in prison.

Under the laws no African is allowed to remain permanently in a white area for more than 72 hours unless he has lived there continuously since birth, has worked there for one employer for 10 years or lived there legally for 15 years.

The commission's recommendations, presented to Parliament in Cape Town Wednesday, have been welcomed by liberals.

Sociologist Michael Sevage said: "At last South Africa is moving into the 20th century, nothing could be more welcome."

Savage, in a study on the cost of South Africa's apartheid laws, calculated that the pass laws cost the taxpayer the equivalent of $134 million a year to administer.

But others did not believe the commission had gone far enough and called for abolition of the laws.

Nthato Motlana, an executive member of the Soweto Black Parents' Association, said: "The pass laws turn ordinary people into criminals. They must be abolished forthwith."

Big Rhodesia Call-Up Begins

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Thousands more of Rhodesia's 270,000 whites will be called on to fight in the war against black-nationalist guerrillas under new conscription rules announced Thursday night.

At the same time, Prime Minister Ian Smith won an almost inconditional mandate from his governing Rhodesian Front party to negotiate a political settlement with black leaders.

Defence Minister Reg Cowper, announcing that exemptions or deferments from military service will be drastically reduced, said some units are so undermanned they cannot fight efficiently.

He said the current situation cannot continue if the war against the guerrillas is to be sustained.

The new rules affect white men younger than 35 who have been exempt from call-up or whose service was deferred, usually for educational or job reasons.

Whites must serve 18 months in the forces and up to the age of 35 may be recalled for periods of between 42 and 90 days. Some of these part-time soldiers now are hardly ever out of uniform.

THE DAILY COLONIST AND VICTORIA TIMES

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two Saanich teenagers facing a number of serious ing a number of charges in connection with the Jan. 11 armed robbery of a Royal Bank of Canada branch were remanded until Monday in Victoria provincial court to fix a date for their preliminary hearing.

Harold Einar Hemstad, 19, of 649 Baxter, and Michael Allan Rhodes, 17, of 576 Margaret, appeared before Judge William Ostler on Thursday, but had the setting of a hearing date adjourned until Monday at their lawyers' request.

The two are charged with the $21,000 holdup of the Royal Bank at 2973 Tillicum in Saanich as well as kidnapping, unlawful confinement, auto theft, theft of a revolver and possession of stolen property.

Three 17-year-olds jointly charged Dec. 21 with a break-in at Arbutus junior high school, 2306 Edgelow, were formally charged Thursday in connection with a number of other school break-ins.

Dwight James Anglehart of 4989 Georgia Park Terrace was charged with a Dec. 20 break-in at Hillcrest elementary, 4421 Green Trees Terrace, Saanich, and chose trial by judge without jury. Preliminary hearing on that charge was set for May 10.

Martin Rayner of 4085 Ebony was charged with a Dec. 4 break-in at Hillcrest and a Dec. 13 break-in at the same school. Rayner elected the same trial method and had a preliminary hearing date of May 9 set.

Richard Charles Velay of 2164 Ferndale was charged with three break-ins: Dec. 4 at Hillcrest, Dec. 15 at Arbutus and Dec. 20 at Hillcrest. He also elected trial by judge without jury and his preliminary hearing was set for May 10.

The joint charge is scheduled for preliminary hearing on April 19.

Bail hearing for four men facing two trafficking charges was put off until today when their lawyers were expected to be present.

John Elvin Cook, 27, of 1251 Pembroke, Craig Alan Davis, 23, of 3255 Cook, and Rodney Trevor Johnson, 25, and David Charles Smith, 22, both of 2600 Dowler, all consented to being remanded in custody.

They were jointly charged Wednesday with possession of codeine and opium tablets for the purpose of trafficking following a drug raid late Tuesday afternoon at Davis' residence.

A 30-year-old Mayne Island man who pleaded guilty to driving while suspended two weeks after he spent 14 days in jail for the same offence was sentenced to a further 21 days by Ostler.

George Gerald David pleaded guilty and his lawyer argued for leniency on the grounds that David's wife had a baby eight days ago and was still in hospital and there were three other children, aged 5, 3 and 1 at home.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court David was checked by Central Saanich police Dec. 30 and admitted being suspended from driving.

Mulligan said David was convicted of impaired driving last April and received concurrent, 14-day sentences Dec. 2 for having a blood-alcohol reading over .08 and driving while suspended.

After hearing that David was receiving approximately $330 a month in welfare, Ostler imposed the jail term.

"I regard you with the profoundest sorrow," Ostler said as 57-year-old Frank Peter Ellis walked into court.

Ellis, a familiar face in Victoria provincial court, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance Wednesday in the 1100 block Douglas and was given a one month sentence.

Ostler described a 30-year-old woman's conduct as "incredible" and said his sympathy was with the children before levying fines totalling $150.

Patricia Lecoy of 546 Alpha was fined $100 for shoplifting jewellery from Woolworth's on Christmas eve and $50 for having a blood-alcohol reading over .08 on New Year's eve.

Ostler noted that the woman had children aged 13, 7, 6, 4 and 1, was on welfare, but still managed to "sit five hours in a beer parlor and then get behind the wheel of a car."

In addition to the fines, Ostler ordered six months probation and issued a ban on entering licenced premises or possession of any liquor.

Scots Seek Trade

GLASGOW (Reuter) — A government-sponsored Scottish Development Agency, set up to bring more work to Scotland, will send its first overseas trade mission to tour North America later this month. Scottish goods ranging from whisky and venison to hand-blown glass and other Scottish crafts will be on show in the United States and Canada.

CITY FLU CONFIRMED

Canada's first case of Victoria A influenza has appeared in Victoria.

But health officials are unable to say whether the disease will spread or fizzle out with a few cases.

Dr. Allan Arneil regional medical health officer, said in an interview the virus was isolated from a middle-aged man who had flu symptoms two weeks ago.

The confirmation came from a Vancouver laboratory Wednesday, one day before another case was reported in Toronto, he said.

The local flu victim had not had flu shots.

The vaccine used in B.C. for swine flu also protects against Victoria A, a highly contagious flu which was responsible for 50 to 100 deaths in Canada last year, Dr. Arneil said.

That vaccine is still being offered to those over 64 years of age and those with chronic illnesses that can be complicated by flu.

Dr. Arneil said it is getting late in the year for Victoria A, (named after Victoria, Australia, where it was first isolated in 1975) to be much of a problem, although last year the virus also got a late start and did not peak until March.

The symptoms of the flu are fever, nausea, over-all muscular aches, and headaches, Dr. Arneil said.

Those contracting it should stay in bed, keep warm, and have plenty of fluids.

Rousseau, Eichmann ... Diver, Nixon Man

VANCOUVER (CP) — Do you know who Jean Jacques Rousseau was? How about Adolf Eichmann?

If you don't know, you're not alone.

Rock singer Elton John, hockey star Bobby Orr and entertainer Barbra Streisand were known to almost every student.

Adam told the SFU Alumni Association Wednesday night that he conducted a two-year survey of 400 students on the subject of "political illiteracy and attitudes of university students."

He said several Canadian universities have adopted compulsory language tests and remedial courses as entrance requirements in reaction to deteriorating functional literacy of students.

"However, hardly any public concern has yet emerged over the equally disturbing facts of political illiteracy," Adam said in his speech.

"Perhaps more disturbing is the blank about leading figures instrumental in the genocide of Jewish people during the Second World War.

Adam said recent notoriety would also explain why Ugandan dictator Idi Amin was known to 32 per cent of the respondents in 1975, but was known to 51 per cent a year later after the Israeli raid on Entebbe.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A picture of a soldier at the wrong time and the wrong place cost Claude Schaffner, 28, of Prince George, B.C., three days in a Mexican jail.

Mr. Schaffner, a hair stylist, said Thursday he was on a tourist trip to Puerto Vallarta last week when he saw a political demonstration. He was taking pictures of the scenery, but his last shot included a uniformed soldier.

"No sooner had I taken the picture when a plainclothes guy toting a machine-gun and two shotguns grabbed me under the arms and pulled me through the public square to some officials seated at a table.

"They sat me down at the table and one of the officials spoke to me in English. They took my camera, exposed the film to destroy it, checked my tourist visa identification, asked me what I was doing."

He was then taken away and put in jail.

Mr. Schaffner said about 60 prisoners were in a 700-squarefoot area—one American, one German, and the rest Mexican. The cell was "unbelievably filthy, filled with cockroaches, bugs and rats climbing the walls."

He said guards took his rings and jewelry and put them in a bag. In the cell, "the prisoners proceeded to strip me and took my grandfather's pocket watch, a family heirloom."

The third day he was released and his belongings returned.

Mr. Schaffner says he will never go back to Mexico.

MADRID — Squads of armed guerrillas attacked police with bombs and submachineguns in at least three Madrid neighborhoods today, killing four and wounding critically four others.

Premier Adolfo Suarez scheduled an emergency cabinet meeting for later today to discuss the wave of political violence that has plunged Spain into its worst crisis since the death of dictator Francisco Franco 14 months ago.

The guerrilla raids came after seven persons were killed in political violence during the week and a senior army general was abducted by urban guerrillas.

In the latest incident, terrorists intercepted a civil guard vehicle on the main Andalucia Highway and threw a bomb or hand grenade inside, killing at least one policeman, police said.

Earlier, two policemen guarding a savings bank in the Camamento area were killed by two men aged about 25 who calmly walked into the bank and shot them with guns equipped with silencers, police said.

In suburban Los Angeles, three gunmen shot and killed two members of the civil guard on duty at a savings bank. Eleven persons were injured in the shooting, according to the news agency Europa Press.

Meanwhile, Spanish opposition leaders, meeting in secret because they feared an armed attack, have called for more rapid political change despite the recent wave of violence.

Paramilitary civil guards took up positions for Thursday night's meeting to prevent any repetition of Monday's attack on a labor lawyers' office in Madrid, when five persons were shot to death.

Despite the cabinet's tough law-and-order stand, unrest by extreme left wingers was reported Thursday in various parts of the country.

In Madrid, small groups of leftists smashed the windows of banks in the city centre Thursday night but were unable to stage any large demonstration as squads of riot police patrolled in jeeps.

In the northeastern region of Catalonia, where factories were shut down Thursday to protest the Madrid shootings, the government lifted the ban on demonstrations to allow several thousand people to march through Barcelona in silence.

Gas and Oil Up in March

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Retail gasoline prices across Canada will go up by 3 to 3.4 cents a gallon on March 2.

And oil companies are seeking Anti-Inflation Board approval to tack on another 0.5 cents a gallon to prices in eastern Ontario and western Quebec including Ottawa and Montreal) on the same date.

The price of other petroleum products, notably diesel fuel and home heating oil, will also rise by comparable amounts along with gasoline on March 2.

But with heating oil at least, the price hike will arrive near the end of the winter heating season and much of the impact on the family budget will be postponed until next fall and winter.

The federal department of energy, mines and resources has announced it will allow the wholesale or "posted" prices of petroleum products in Canada to be increased by 2.3 cents a gallon, plus an additional amount for federal sales tax increases, plus any further increases approved by the AIB to cover oil company non-crude cost increases.

Cabbage Leads Vegetable Jump

If you are a cabbage fancier and haven't bought any in the past week or so you are probably in for a bit of a shock.

Poor weather conditions in the U.S. have resulted in increased prices for a number of fresh produce items and the most dramatic change has been in the cost of cabbage.

It has gone up anywhere from 18 per cent to 44 per cent in the past week depending on where you buy it.

However, the word from the wholesalers is that the situation has moderated at the source, the consumer price has peaked and is likely to begin coming down within a week or so.

Other items affected are celery and carrots from California and tomatoes, Zucchini and peppers from Mexico.

The California items are up in price primarily because of drought conditions which have reduced the supply. The supply of the Mexican items is down because of transportation problems.

Citrus fruits, like grapefruit and oranges, could also cost slightly more next week as the result of snow and freezing conditions earlier this month in Florida.

A spokesman in the produce department at Woodward's said the price of cabbage has gone to 39 cents a pound this week, up 15 cents from last week.

Tomatoes are selling this week at 89 cents a pound, an increase of 10 cents over last

CLOSURE WARNING

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald served notice today that the government plans to invoke closure — a parliamentary device to limit debate — to force through tax legislation that critics say benefits only the rich.

Macdonald told the Commons that the government will allow only eight more hours of debate on the bill during committee discussion.

The legislation results from the May 25 budget last year, and must be passed by the end of February if benefits are to apply to 1976 income tax returns, the government says.

The bill would increase by $15 million tax benefits to Canadians who buy private retirement plans and sent their children to babysitters.

North Jails Urged

OTTAWA (CP — Prisons in the northern part of Canada, which would be naturally escape-proof because of isolation and climate, were suggested as one solution to Canada's prison problems Thursday. United Canada Backed

EVANSTON, Ill. (CP) — The U.S. government intervened Thursday in the debate on Canada's future, asserting American interest in continuing to have a strong northern neighbor.

Ending more than two months of official U.S. silence on the election of a separatist government in Quebec, a state department officer gave a business seminar a delicately-worded declaration of U.S. concern.

John Rouse, head of the Canadian affairs office, told the 100 businessmen that Washington should not and will not seek to influence Canada's internal affairs.

But in what was interpreted by many as a subtle signal of U.S. preference for a united Canada, he said Canada is extremely important to the United States:

"The U.S. government sees a Canada that is vigorous, self-confident, independent and actively engaged internationally as the best northern neighbor we can have.

"And obviously we are interested in any developments which might affect these factors, even marginally."

One source said Rouse's participation in the siminar on business prospects in Quebec was a deliberate and significant state department move.

Rouse said both U.S. government and private American interests should take the situation calmly since any change would be gradual and there are responsible leaders on both sides of the Canadian debate.

Freezing Eastern States Declare Gas Emergencies

Times News Services

Ohio, New York and New Jersey were under energy emergencies today as officials sought to conserve dwindling natural gas supplies. The fuel crisis in the northeastern United States threatened to add more than 250,000 new layoffs to the ranks of the estimated 400,000 already unemployed due to the energy shortage.

Meanwhile, the governors of Florida, Pennsylvania and Tennessee asked President Jimmy Carter to declare their states disaster areas.

And an arctic cold front settling over the Midwest and East was expected to drop temperatures to —20 Celsius and perhaps cause some cuts in natural gas supplies for residential users.

The unusually cold weather east of the Rocky Mountains has closed about 4,000 plants and caused the 400,000 layoffs, federal energy officials say. Officials in several states said they expect application for unemployment benefits and food stamps to soar because of layoffs caused by the natural gas shortages.

Elsewhere in the freeze belt Thursday, officials in Philadelphia declared a state of emergency because of natural gas shortages; blizzard conditions swept northern Illinois and parts of Michigan; the Mississippi, Ohio and Illinois rivers were frozen and barges carrying oil and other supplies remained locked in ice; temperatures hit —34 in North Dakota and Minnesota and —20 in Chicago, and Kentucky agriculture officials estimated animal deaths, production losses and high feed bills were costing the state's farmers an estimated $2 million daily.

In Ottawa the National Energy Board approved the export of up to 2.4 million gallons of liquefied natural gas to the United States.

Holiday Boost Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The government introduced labor-law amendments in the Commons Thursday that would increase the number of legal holidays and vacations for workers under federal law and permit so-called compressed work weeks.

The new legislation would clear the way for adding Boxing Day, the day after Christmas and proposed new Heritage Day on the third Monday in February to the present list of eight national holidays.

However, the labor-law amendments and another bill specifically establishing an annual Heritage Day are unlikley to get through Parliament's crowded schedule in time to take effect this year.

The legislation also opens the way to compressed work weeks such as four 10-hour days by agreement among employer, employees and the federal labor minister.

20 Missing After Fire

BRECKENRIDGE, Minn. (AP) — About 20 persons were unaccounted for today after a pre-dawn fire swept through a three-storey hotel in termperatures that plunged to —30 degrees C.

Three hours after the blaze began in the Stratford Hotel, firemen reported that only one person was known to have escaped. Authorities said none of the other occupants had called in to report they were safe.

Government Order Blunts Cartoonist's Pen

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A civil servant whose hard-hitting political cartoons appear in the Times and other B.C. newspapers has been told by the provincial government to stop his free-lance drawing.

Bob Bierman, a technical assistant with the environment ministry, said today he was told Jan. 17 by Deputy Minister Ben Marr to quit "moonlighting."

He said he was called into Marr's office and told a section of the Public Service Act prohibits any public service employee from engaging in any other remunerative work.

Bierman's caustic cartooning also appears occasionally in the Vancouver Sun and the bi-monthly B.C. Today.

Bierman said while he has no concrete evidence the government is singling him out because of his cartooning, the fact he was called on the carpet by the deputy minister's office indicates his case is being handled differently.

"That was the first indicator they were concerned with more than just the concept of moonlighting," Bierman said.

He estimates that there are about 2,000 other public service employees in Victoria who work at outside jobs.

"Unless an effort is made to get after 'all the free-lancers . . . then I would have to think that I am being singled out."

Bierman said he has written the Public Service Commission seeking approval for his free-lance cartooning which he has been doing during the three years he has worked for the government.

If the commission rejects his request, he will then make a decision on whether to quit his full-time job, drop his free-lance work or continue doing both and see what happens.

He said his immediate supervisor, Art Benson, director of the research analysis branch of the environment ministry, supports him in his effort to continue cartooning.

He said Benson sent a letter to the commission, stating his

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES DOWN:

1. PHONOGRAPHS not photographs. The clue suggests that you would, as a-guess, ascribe some value; intrinsically, however, many a personal collection of photographs is plainly valueless. A collection of old PHONOGRAPHS would be worth money.
4. LISTING not lifting. The clue's word "inability" (as distinct from physical disability) suits LISTING better. Also, while LISTING things at all calls for literate ability, any worker can expect to lift things within reasonable limits.
8. REGAIN not retain. An actress old enough to need her face lifted is past her youth, so the question is of REGAINING it rather than retaining it.
10. MAIL not hail. The clue's hint that one might not want to be bothered answering, suits MAIL better. There is an obligation to answer a hail (when operating a boat on the water).
11. SAW not paw. "Would upset" is a bit too strong a statement for a paw, which might well do no damage. A SAW would scratch; also, having been laid on the table by a person (who should know better), gives reason for displeasure.
16. BEEFY not beery. The last four words of the clue are far more necessary for BEEFY.

CLUES ACROSS:

1. PARKS not Paris. The moderate phrase "quite numerous" suits PARKS. There is a great diversity of pleasure in Paris.
6. TIBET not Tiber. The clue tends to see crossing "this" as a journey (as made by a "traveller"); but many a tourist, say, or quite ordinary person might cross the Tiber, a river.
7. FOILED not fooled or fouled. As the clue suggests, a man, even if repeatedly FOILED, should not lose heart or give up. Being fooled, or fouled, is calculated to stir anger rather than encourage a resigned sort of attitude.
9. JOYS not toys. A happy home needn't involve many toys.
12. NINE not none. If a boy has real "friends," he will always be prepared to give them some candies, surely!
13. PRY not cry. Even if crying is considered weak, there is nothing base about it (that it should be "stooped to").
14. WELL not will. Strictly speaking, a will is not the actual source ("from" which to have expectations), as a WELL is. It would be the estate rather than the will.
15. CAB not lab. CAB is more firmly apt. There is nothing to prevent you envisaging a lab as scrupulously clean at all times.
19. CHOIRS not chairs. "Skill and hard work" relate more directly to CHOIRS, since it is by performance that they excel. Chairs are more material in their nature.
21. GORGE not forge. To be a forger calls for more than mere "weakness" one must be morally unscrupulous, not to say skillful.
23. JERKY not perky. JERKY, yes; but one may doubt that movements, in themselves, can be perky (without references to such things as facial expression, story line, etc.).

AT HOME with their son, Osgood, are actor Anthony Perkins and wife Berry. A perennial bachelor until four years ago, Perkins is now the complete homebody.

Turn-About for Tony Perkins

By JOYCE MAYNARD

NEW YORK — The baby, whose name is Elvis, wore only a T-shirt with the names of Yves Saint Laurent, Calvin Klein and Bill Blass printed on the front. He may have started out the day in diapers, but they were long gone and not missed as he sat at the breakfast table splashing his spoon in the oatmeal.

Similarly casual in his attire and blissfully free of underwear, Osgood, soon to be 3, circled the breakfast table in a blue taffeta Batman cape, making Batmobile noises.

The children's mother, balancing the telephone between her shoulder and ear and speaking perfect French, was counting out vitamin pills and sprinkling unrefined sugar in the direction of the cereal bowl.

And in the centre, surrounded by Lego blocks, Fisher-Price toy people, a Curious George stuffed monkey and red dump truck, the proud, if somewhat dazed-looking father, who had gotten up "on the wrong side of 10 o'clock," gulped down a handful of granola and surveyed all that was his, and all that was his no longer.

Tony Perkins — the perennial boy-psychopath in movies and, until less than four years ago, the perennial bachelor in life — has become what is known as a family man.

"If you had told me, five years ago, that this is where I'd be today, I never would have believed it," said the 44-year-old actor, currently starring on Broadway in "Equus," from which he will soon take a month-long leave of absence for the filming of the movie "Winterkill."

"I never pictured myself married," he continued. "I never had that much success with women." Tall and broadshouldered, in a T-shirt and blue jeans, with his hair close-cropped and graying, Mr. Perkins spoke in the deliberate, almost eerily quiet tones of the characters he has tended to portray in films. "The women I met always seemed frightened," he said. "Berry wasn't."

The woman responsible for Perkin's current domesticity is the 28-year-old photographer-socialite Berry Berenson, the granddaughter of both Bernard Berenson and Elsa Shiaparelli, and sister of Marisa Berenson, the acress and model. Like her husband, Berry described her life, before the marriage and the children, as worlds away from considerations of "Sesame Street" and strollers.

"I was living in a studio on East 58th Street with a dog and a rabbit, doing freelance photography, going out late and sleeping past noon," she said, fixing the top on Osgood's bottle. "Frank Perry, the director wanted to use my apartment for the movie 'Play It As It Lays' — it was so typical of something, I guess. The day of the filming I overslept, and a whole lot of cameramen and people came in and I was standing in the middle of the floor, where my dog just finished making a mess, saying, 'It isn't always like this, really.' And Frank was saying, 'No, this is perfect, don't change a thing.' "

It was during the filming of "Play It As It Lays" that Berry Berenson met the film's male star, Tony Perkins, whom she had admired since she was in her teens. She moved into his Chelsea brownstone shortly after that, and became pregnant almost immediately. "I kept telling Tony, 'This isn't your problem. I can raise the kid myself, you don't have to marry me,' " she said, "but he said he wanted to, and now here we are."

A striking, long-faced young woman with shoulder-length blond hair and bangs, Berry wore a brown skirt, a knitted vest over a man-tailored shirt, and knee socks and brogues. She was eating lots of bananas and nuts, she explained, in an effort to put on weight. She is very thin.

"Neither one of us had so much as touched a baby," said Perkins, adding that he once held a child in a publicity still for a movie, which is more than his wife had ever done. "I never knew anyone who had a child," Berry explained.

But if the first four decades of his life were spent in near-total ignorance of Babar's Adventures or the existence of Pampers, Perkins appears to have made up for that in the last three years, with a nearly total absorption in parenthood. Because of his theatre schedule, he can be home nearly all day, and says that, like his wife, he spends most of that time playing with the children.

The Perkinses have a mother's helper who comes in five days a week to help care for the children, but they do not believe in "putting the children out to pasture" in day care centres for very young children, unless, Berry said, "the mother really has to work." Except for Berry's recent one-day trip to California for her sister's wedding, and the time she spent in the hospital when Elvis was born 11 months ago, neither parent has been away from the children for even one night. When Osgood was just 8 weeks old the three of them traveled to England for the filming of "Murder on the Orient Express." Now Berry "shleps the kids to Times Square" several times a week for family visits or for dinners in between the matinee and evening performances of "Equus."

"Osgood loves to see the curtain call," she said. "But once I brought him too early and the sound of the horses really scared him."

Berry, who used to photograph beautiful people at parties that began at an hour she now spends sleeping, mostly photographs the children these days.

There may have been a small pang, she confessed, when she went to see her sister in the movies — Marisa being more beautiful and more famous, with a perfect apartment whose living room rug has never known the touch of Tonka trucks, or the sound of the "Sesame Street" theme, Marisa being free, still, to sleep till 2 p.m. if she chooses.

But Berry never wanted the glamorous life, she said serenely, flipping Osgood in the air and giving his bare bottom a look of total devotion.

Tammy Tell Me True on 11 at noon (xx). Naive little romantic comedy isn't really as bad as it could have been as country girl Sandra Dee decides it's time to get an education and heads off to college (1961).

Million Dollar Kid, on 11 at 2 p.m. One of the low budget Bowery Boys series, where the boys try to show a rich lad money can't buy everything (1944).

Operation Mad Ball, on 7 at 3 p.m. and 2 at 11:45 p.m. (xxx). Mickey Rooney, Jack Lemmon, Ernie Kovacs Star in this delightfully wacky army comedy about an operator who ignores all the regulations in his search for fun for himself and buddies (1957).

Chinatown, on 6 at 8 p.m. (xxx). Roman Polanski directed Fay Dunaway and Jack Nicholson in this story of corruption in Los Angeles in the 1930s which won an Oscar for screenwriter Robert Towne (1974).

21 hours at Munich, on 8 at 8 p.m. and 6 at 11:20 p.m. William Holden and Franco Nero star in this dramatization of the incident at the 1972 Olympic Games, when eight Arab terrorists held nine Israeli athletes hostage (1976).

A Horse Called Comanche, on 5 at 8:50 p.m. (xx). A wild stallion is tamed by an Indian, then captured by the U.S. Cavalry just before Custer's defeat (1958).

Son of Fury, on 2 at 9 p.m. (xxx). Lots of action and romance in this 18th century drama. Tyrone Power, wronged by his uncle (George Sanders), leaves England, finds a bucket of pearls on a Pacific Island, and returns looking for revenge (1942).

The Great Ziegfeld, on 12 at 9 p.m. (xxxx). Story of the great American showman is superbly told and the production is in the Ziegfeld manner. William Powell, Luise Rainer, and Myrna Loy star in this three hour, 15 minute Academy Award winning epic (1936).

Murderer's Row, on 7 at 11 p.m. (xx). A sequel to Dean Martin's Matt Helm starrer The Silencers, but not as good. Martin just doesn't cut it in the super agent class, but Karl Malden, overplaying the arch baddie, comes through with an interesting performance (1966).

Georgia, Georgia, on 13 at 11 p.m. (xx) Diana Sands and

Spotlight on Movies

Dirk Benedict star in this story of a black singer's involvement with a white photographer and some American defectors. Interesting but uneven (1972).

The Man Who Understood Women, on 8 at midnight (xxx). A strange combination of sharp satire and heavy drama, unevenly balanced but with much to recommend it including a fine performance by Henry Fonda as a Hollywood genius who makes an aspiring actress a star, marries her, then finds he has no time for her. Leslie Caron is the actress (1959).

Marriage on the Rocks, on 12 at 12:15 a.m. (xx) One of those screwy comedies that almost works, but is fun anyway. Frank Sinatra and Deborah Kerr get a Mexican divorce by mistake, and Miss Kerr marries Frank's best friend, Dean Martin. More complications, then a happy ending (1965).

Blood Suckers, on 13 at 12:30 a.m. (x). Offbeat vampire yarn, relieved with location scenes in Cyprus before the current warfare (1972).

My Blood Runs Cold, on 5 at 1 a.m. (x) Designed for the teenage set who might gasp at watching Troy Donahue playing a psychopath (1965).

Hearts of the West, on 6 at 1:20 a.m. (xxx). Donald Pleasence, Andy Griffith, Blythe Danner play this humorous view of Hollywood filmmakers of the 1930s (1974).

Rogues Regiment, on 2 at 1:45 a.m. (xx). Dick Powell joins the foreign legion to track down a Nazi officer in hiding (1948).

God's Little Acre, on 8 at 2 a.m. (xx). Erskine Caldwell's torrid novel about the dirt farmers in Georgia reaches the screen with some of the earthy passions diluted. Robert Ryan is effective, Tina Louise is seductive, and Aldo Ray and Buddy Hackett deliver good performances (1958).

The Fly, on 6 at 3:35 a.m. (xxx). Superior science fiction thriller with a literate script, good production effects and capable performances by Vincent Price, Al Hedison and Herbert Marshall (1958).

Ken Berry uses safecracker's skills to save Sean Marshall

O. Henry Classic Opens New Children's Series

ABC Television will launch its new children's series, the "ABC Short Story Specials," on Saturday, Jan. 29 at 11 a.m., with "Valentine's Second Chance," and an adaptation of an O. Henry classic.

The series will air monthly on Channel 4 bringing to Saturday morning children's programming "a new dimension of quality," said an executive, "with a calibre of live-action dramatic entertainment that has marked our prestigious series of 'ABC Afterschool Specials'."

The half-hour anthology series will draw its content from the short stories of such noted authors as O. Henry, Robert Arthur, Robert McCloskey and Hugh Pentecost. "Additionally," he said, "we will encourage the utilization of new writers of original material."

Popular actor Ken Berry stars in the title role of "Valentine's Second Chance," the story of dapper Jimmy Valentine, a reformed safecracker who risks his new status as an honest citizen to save the life of a young boy trapped inside a time-locked safe. Others in the cast include Greg Morris, Elizabeth Bauer, Burke Byrnes, Max Showalter, Sean Marshall and Ham Larson.

The executive producer for the series is Allen "Duke" Ducovny, who has long been associated with children's programming, most recently as Director of Children's Programs for the CBS Television Network, and previously as Vice-President of National Periodical Publications (NPP).

Ducovny said that the "ABC Short Story Specials" will "provide high quality entertainment for young people, utilizing the talents of distinguished producers and directors and actors whose work has been seen previously only in prime time production."

Wonder Woman Goes West

Rustlers strike the ranch of J. P. Hadley, who supplies beef to the armed forces, and Steve Trevor and Wonder Woman go to Texas to investigate, on the ABC Television Network's "Wonder Woman," Saturday, Jan. 29 at 8 p.m., Roy Rogers guest stars as J. P. Hadley.

In "The Bushwhackers," Hadley's son, Jeff, is resentful because his widower father is also raising five war orphans as part of the family. When Hadley informs Sheriffs Lampkin and Bodie, who are in league with the rustlers, that Steve Trevor is en route to the ranch, a landslide is set in motion to delay him. The rustlers are seen by Charlie Brighteagle, one of the orphans, who takes Wonder Woman to the site.

Lynda Carter stars as Wonder Woman/Diana Prince and Lyle Waggoner as Steve Trevor. Richard Eastham plays the recurring role of General Blankenship and Beatrice Colen, that of Etta Candy. Henry Darrow guest stars as Lampkin and Lance Kerwin as Jeff Hadley.

Newman at the Races

Actor Paul Newman's debut in major world championship auto racing will highlight "CBS Sports Spectacular," Saturday, Feb. 5, and during National Basketball Association coverage on Sunday, Feb. 6, when CBS Sports goes trackside for the 24 hours of Daytona in Daytona, Fla.

Ken Squier, CBS Sports motorsports editor, will provide the commentary.

The event, for world championship of makes and the Daytona-LeMans trophy, is the longest and most prestigious race of its kind in the western hemisphere.

Some of the top names in international racing will be competing in the 60-car field, including world GT champions Jackie Icks of Belgium, Jochen Mass of West Germany, and Jean-Pierre Beltoise and Jean Ronadeau of France.

England's David Hobbs, a sometimes motorsports commentator for CBS Sports, and America's Sam Posey also will compete.

Extra added attraction to the field, for the first time in years, is a top women's team, consisting of Formula One star Lela Lombardi of Italy and Christine Beckers of Belgium.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Super-wide and wide-angle lenses have a shorter focal length than standard lenses and their angle-of-view covers more than 46 degrees, which gives a much wider field.
Their deep depth-of-field makes these lenses indispensable for taking snapshots, news and sports events, shooting where there is limited room to back up, photographing large groups of people, and for taking pictures of buildings. Super-wide and wide-angle lenses have an optical performance of exaggerating perspective, but this feature can be used to advantage in creating special effects photography.
Telephoto lenses bring distant subjects right up close. These sharp lenses compress space in front of and behind the main subject, making everything seem much closer together.
Come in and see our fine selection of lenses at Jus-Rite.

Television Mailbag

By RICK ROBERTS

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Could you please fill me in on the background of Geraldo Rivera?—B.S., Concord, Calif.

A. Rivera, one of the contributors to ABC's "Good Morning America," as well as host of his own series of specials, came to broadcasting by way of law.

He was working as a storefront lawyer in Harlem when he became frustrated at his inability to change anything, he says. He attended the Columbia School of Journalism and began his new career.

In his years with WABC-TV in New York, he has won five Emmys, two Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Awards, four Associated Press Broadcasters Awards, a Peabody Award and a DuPont-Columbia Award.

A native of New York, Rivera worked in the merchant marine and as a professional soccer player before going to college and then on to law school.

Q. I missed the first few episodes of "Good Times" this year and wondered what happened to James Evans, the father of the family. We saw him buried by his family, but don't know why he died. We would appreciate your answer to clear the mystery for us.—M.L., San Mateo, Calif.

A. John Amos, who played James Evans in the series, was the victim of a contract dispute with Norman Lear's Tandem Productions Co. When they failed to reach agreement, the producers decided to kill him off in the show, rather than try to replace him.

According to the latest reports, there will be some effort to provide some love interest for Esther Rolle, who plays Florida Evans, later in the year.

Q. Please help settle a dispute about who were the stars of the old television series "The Lone Ranger." We can't agree on who the two were.—L.P., Camden, N.J.

A. Clayton Moore starred as the masked man, while Jay Silverheels portrayed Tonto, his faithful Indian sidekick.

Q. What was the name of the young actress who was Elly May on "The Beverly Hillbillies?" What is she doing now?—R.F., Canton, Ohio.

A. Donna Douglas is the name of the actress you're thinking of. After appearing in a few other television series, she dropped out of the industry and began selling real estate in Southern California. There have been some reports she may return to acting and also appear as a country-western singer.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Rick Roberts, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

Caught in the Squeeze, and Fighting

What do you do if you've spent years building a modestly successful business and you suddenly discover everything you've worked for threatened by Big Business and Big Labor?

If you're Hank, you fight back.

Hank is the title character in a hard-hitting journalistic drama to be telecast on CBC's For the Record series Sunday, Jan. 30 at 9 p.m. The original teleplay by Don Bailey and Ralph L. Thomas is directed by Don Haldane and stars Bob Warner, Florence Paterson and Richard Donat.

Hank is an average middle-aged guy who works hard at the fresh produce wholesale business he's built up over 35 years. To relax he likes to visit a local pub with his wife, sit in with his banjo in a few dixieland sets, and enjoy a beer with some of the long-time pals among his employees. He's reached the stage where he can afford a new car every two years or so and spend a couple of winter weeks with his wife holidaying in Florida.

But his credit rating at the bank will only allow him to modernize his outdated facilities at the plant over a period of time, so it's rough going competing with large-scale competitors and trying to match their union-negotiated salaries.

Hank's real troubles begin when a large international wholesale operation adjacent to his decides to expand its facilities and begins to sell at a loss temporarily to lure Hank's customers away and force him to sell out. To add to his problems, a short-sighted union official who wants to organize his employees persuades them to demand that Hank immediately match his competitor's wages.

When the bank turns down his request for a bigger loan to replace outdated equipment, Hank is forced to mortgage his home just to keep the business going. But Big Business and Big Labor finally join forces to achieve their mutual goals. Hank's workers walk off the job to form picket lines, and violence flares up. A desperate Hank finds himself caught in an ever-tightening squeeze that jeopardizes his life's work.

Versatile Bob Warner, who plays the title role in Hank, has appeared in numerous television and threatrical productions and became a familiair face to millions of Canadians for his continuing role as the cop in CBC-TV's long-running game show, This Is the Law. Florence Paterson, who plays Hank's understanding wife, drew critical acclaim for her work in such relatively recent CBC-TV dramas as Freedom of the City, and Of the Fields, Lately.

Series producer of For the Record is Ralph L. Thomas.

World of the Cat: Fact and Legends

Hal Linden, star of ABC News' young people's magazine series, "Animals Animals Animals," explores the world of the cat in art, history, legend and literature, in the program airing Sunday, Jan. 30 on the ABC Television Network.

"Animals Animals Animals" goes to the Olympic Game Farm in Washington where Dr. Randall Eaton of the University of Washington's zoology department shows how a bobcat and a cougar adjust to a new environment. Bobcats, Dr. Eaton observes, "deposit scents by rubbing their cheeks along the perimeter of their turf, salivating and establishing their presence in an area ... It was not really man's choice or desire to domesticate the cat, it was the cat's. Man attracted great numbers of rodents which provided food for cats that adapted to life at the edge of man's world."

A look back in time reveals that the cat has perhaps been as hated as loved. Julius Caesar hated felines and the Chinese loved them. In the Middle Ages, cats were killed and burned as agents of the Devil, and Lous XV gave cats the run of the city of Paris to please the queen, a cat lover, which the Emperor Napoleon was not.

"Animals Animals Animals" explores the role of the cat in art, spotlighting the Renaissance works. Pietro Lorenzetti's "The Last Supper," Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" and Titian's "Man With the Glove." Authors Mark Twain, Samuel Johnson, Ernest Hemingway and Walt Whitman were cat lovers, as was Henry James who wrote with a cat on his shoulder.

Edward Lear's classic poem, "The Owl and the Pussycat," comes to life in colorful animation as does a fable, "Belling the Cat," in which a group of mice set out to make a better cat trap and thereby attach a bell to a cat. The mice conclude, however, that the idea is strictly for the birds.

Another segment features Chreszentia Allen, at her West Organe, New Jersey, studio, who has been photographing felines for 20 years, "when the cat is willing."

Singer-actress Lynn Kellogg performs an original song about cats, and Roger Caras, who along with Ms. Kellogg appears each week on "Animals Animals Animals," comments on problems centering on the control of our cat population.

"Animals Animals Animals" is written and directed by executive producer Lester Cooper. Peter Weinberg is the producer of "Animals Animals Animals," a presentation of ABC News Public Affairs.

AMATEUR SLEUTHS Frank and Joe Hardy, played by Parker Stevenson and Shaun Cassidy, help their Private detective father solve his cases in The Hardy Boys Mystery Hour, starting this Sunday on Channel 4 at 7 p.m.

SUNSPOTS

Sunspots — huge blemishes bigger than the earth that come and go on an eleven-year cycle — are the subject of a NOVA investigation, Wednesday, Feb. 2 at 8 p.m. on Channel 9 (rebroadcast Saturday, Feb. 5 at 5 p.m.).

Some people have tried to relate the sunspot cycle to cycles of weather and climate on Earth: such theories generally have not received scientific approval. However, now it appears that the sun sometimes loses its spots for decades at a time, resulting in a very cold Earth.

Spotlight on Movies

Eleanor and Franklin (xxxx), on 8 at 12:30 p.m. Jane Alexander and Edward Herrmann play the parts of Mr. and Mrs. FDR in this movie based on the Pulitzer Prize winning biography by Joseph Lash. A total of 11 Emmys were won by this show. (1976).

The Pharaoh's Woman (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Senseless epic set in Egypt, with Armando Fracioli combatting John Drew Barrymore, pretender to the throne. (1960).

A Night in Casablanca (xx), on 13 at 2 p.m. The Marx Brothers are involved in North Africa intrigue. Enough humor for ardent followers, but others beware. (1946).

The Hunchback of Notre Dame (xxx), on 5 at 3 p.m. This 1957 version with Anthony Quinn and Gina Lollobrigida is not up to the quality of Charles Laughton and Maureen O'Hara in the 1936 movie of the same title, but Gina's Esmeralda is the sexiest so far.

Hearts of the West (xx), on 5 at 9 p.m. Donald Pleasence and Blyth Danner star in this comedy of Hollywood filmmakers of the 30s down amid the broncos. (1974).

Dark Passage (xx), on 12 at 9:30 p.m. Great for Bogart fans, in this one he escapes from San Quentin to prove himself innocent of murdering his wife. Occasionally good, but uneven melodrama. (1947).

The Wild Bunch (xxx), on 6 at midnight. Balletlike violence on the Texas-Mexican border in 1913 with cycnical band of outlaws vs. order and the Mexican Army. Motorcars and machine guns are used in symbolic elegance as director Sam Peckinpah delivers a cinematic coup by turning on the audience to blood-gushing death. (1969).

Warlock (xxx), on 8 at midnight. Gunfighter is hired by a town to wipe out outlaws, afterwards his own rule is challenged by a cowboy who helped him clean up. Too many plot threads, but Richard Widmark, Anthony Quinn and Dorothy Malone make it all interesting. (1959).

Blow-Up (xxxx), on 7 and 12 at 12:40 a.m. Fascinating psychological puzzler of the young photographer (David Hemmings) who believes he's the accidental witness to murder. (1966).

Die! Die! My Darling (xx), on 7 at 2:10 a.m. Demented woman keeps a girl prisoner because she was the fiancee of her dead son. Standard shocker, with good performance by Tallulah Bankhead. (1965).

The Age of Consent, on 6 at 2:30 a.m. Eric Linden and Michael Cromwell show how growing up leaves scars. (1932).

For the Love of Mike (xx), on 8 at 2:30 a.m. Mild happenings as an Indian boy trains a horse, hoping to use prize money from the country fair to build a shrine in his village. (1960).

CO-HOSTS for the fourth annual presentation of the American Music Awards on Channel 4 at 9 p.m. Monday are Lou Rawls, Helen Reddy and Glen Campbell. The American Music Award is the only major entertainment award determined by the votes of music fans.

Bob La Pierre, after 10 years in jail

Decade in Prison

The Eleventh Year, a poignant autobiographical film essay of one man's experience as a prisoner for more than 10 years, will be broadcast on Channel 9 Monday, Jan. 31 at 11 p.m.

Robert La Pierre was a New Jersey resident sentenced to life imprisonment for murder at the age of 18. More than a decade later, he was paroled from the Bordertown Reformatory and entered Trenton State College.

The Eleventh Year is largely a reflection on his years spent in prison, as well as a record of his subsequent adjustment to the outside world. According to Executive Producer Betty Adams, "The subject returns to the place where he first was incarcerated and goes back to the cell where he spent much of his life. He discusses the emotions he felt and the changes he underwent during his prison term."

La Pierre also recalls his childhood, much of it spent on the streets of Newark. "I guess about the time I was 17, I had sort of taken it for granted that eventually I was going to jail," he recalls. Yet despite his difficult youth, his confrontation with the law, and his prison term, the young man is hopeful of making a carreer of helping other people.

CHARLES GREELEY ABBOT, director of the Smithsonian observatory in 1907, was considered an eccentric for his views on sunspots. However, his records are now being reviewed, with surprising results. It's all part of Nova's The Sunspot Mystery on Channel 9 at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Knievel Now Jumping Jaws

In his wildest dreams, the greatest promoter of them all, Phineas T. Barnum, hardly could have envisioned the spectacular cast of acts that will accompany Evel Knievel's unprecedented jump over the world's largest indoor salt-water pool, stocked with 13 killer sharks, on "Evel Knievel's Death Defiers," a 90-minute special to be broadcast live from various locations across the country, Monday, Jan. 31 at 8:30 p.m.

Seventy-two-year-old Karl Wallenda, the greatest of the Flying Wallendas, will perform his famed high-wire act between two skyscrapers at night; free-fall artist Joe Gerlach will dive off an eight-storey platform into a minuscule sponge; daredevil aerialist Dave Merrifield plans a dangerous repertoire of trapeze feats while hanging from an airborne helicopter and will climax the event by hanging by his neck; Orval Kisselburg will be blown 30 feet through the air by an explosive charge under a chair; and snowmobile specialist Ron Phillips will attempt a jump for distance off a ski-jump ramp, traveling and landing at more than 90 miles per hour.

All those breathtaking acts will be climaxed by Knievel's attempt to clear the yawning jaws of 13 Lemon sharks, one of the most aggressive and unpredictable of the species, in the indoor pool, built especially for the event, at the Chicago Amphitheater.

The German-born Wallenda made his American debut in 1928 in New York's Madison Square Garden with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus and toured with the circus for 17 years, during which time he created the never-before-seen seven-person pyramid, with members of his family on the high wire. The Flying Wallendas were acknowledged as the best in their field. His most recent stunt was a high wire act beside the River Thames in London.

Gerlach, a Hungarian platform diver who defected to the United States after the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne, gave birth to his act while testing foam rubber landing pits used by pole vaulters. He introduced it at a Minneapolis water carnival in 1965, leaping into a sponge from a ladder on stage. In the special, he will jump from a platform into a specially constructed sponge inside the Amphitheatre.

Trapeze artist Merrifield is a former college gymnast who believes he is the only full-time aerialist doing his act under a moving helicopter, reaching speeds as high as 80 miles per hour. He has performed for 18 years in almost every state in the country and in parts of Canada.

Kisselburg, "The Human Bomb," wears no special protective clothing, only white overalls, and no crash helmet, while being blown out of a cardboard chair by an explosive charge set within 12 inches of his body.

FONZIE'S SITTING RIGHT ON TOP OF IT

By JAMES GREGORY

HOLLYWOOD — A new craze is sweeping America's youth — and already its created a $10 million business — in "Fonzie" products.

The kids are buying millions of T-shirts, posters, beach towels and nearly a hundred other items bearing the face of Henry Winkler, who plays The Fonz on the TV smash hit show, "Happy Days."

"We've sold from three million to four million Fonzie T-shirts," happily reports an executive of Allison Manufacturing Co. in New York Ctiy.

"Over three million Fonzie posters has been sold?" says Lou Mindling, director of licensing for Paramount Picture, which produces the show and owns the rights to the characters in it.

"Millions of packages of Topps Bubble Gum containing pictures of Fonzie and his TV pals have been sold.

"There are Fonzie lunch kits, puzzles, games, paper dolls, books, paint sets, bean bags, leather jackets, even knee-high socks for girls — and all of them are making money.

"Several of the people we licensed to make Fonzie posters can retire now.

"One fellow made over $500,000."

Paramount gets a substantial cut. Mindling said a manufacturer pays 5 to 10 per cent of the wholesale price for the right to use the Fonzie character.

More than $10 million worth of Fonzie products at retail prices already have been sold, most of them this year, he revealed.

Perhaps the one who makes the least out of the whole craze is the man whose face launched it, Winkler.

According to the Hollywood Reporter, Winkler receives between 5 and 6 per cent of Paramount's profits. This, says a merchandising agent, has yielded Winkler only an estimated $6,000 to $12,000, so far.

Winkler's agent, Tom Newman, refused to discuss his client's take on Fonzie products.

"That's between Winkler and Paramount," he said.

"Neither Henry nor I would want to license a cheaply made item or a bad item," Mindling said.

"For example, we've never licensed a skateboard, because we feel that it's dangerous for kids.

Meanwhile, everyone concerned believes the bonanza has just begun.

Coming up soon, Mindling disclosed, are stuffed Fonzie dolls to be advertised on the back of 50 million boxes of Nabisco candy . . . plush Fonzie slippers and denim shoes . . . a Fonzie bicycle, home pinball game, motorcycle game, Fonzie drinking glasses . . . and even Fonzie sheets and pillowcases, so that America's kids can sleep happily clsoe to the image of their newest hero.

BOOK REPORT

A new program: "Gould on Books," begins Feb. 1 at 8:30 on Channel 10. Host for the 10-week series is Ed Gould, a Victoria columnist.

Gould, who has had five of his own books published, will interview authors, publishers, book reviewers, booksellers, book designers and printers and other interesting people involved in the book industry.

On the first program Gould will outline the highlights of the series in an interview conducted by Channel 10's Rob Wilson. On Feb. 8 he will speak with Robert Sward, former writer in residence at University of Victoria, and now a publisher and editor. On the same program Gould will discuss childrens' books with Ted Ashlee, author of several books for the young reader.

Spotlight on Movies

Eleanor and Franklin (xx-xx), on 8 at 12:30 p.m. This is the conclusion to the biographical movie of Mr. and Mrs. FDR which started on 8 at 12:30 p.m. Monday.

The Big Carnival (xxxx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Terrific drama packs a king-size wallop. Grim tale of a nasty big city reporter stuck in the sticks who capitalizes on a mine disaster to gain attention and ride himself back to the big time. Unrelenting in its cynicism. Kirk Douglas, Jan Sterling (1951).

A Pistol for Ringo (xx), on 13 at 2 p.m. Montgomery Wood is the gun-shooting hero in Texas where he combats marauding Mexicans hiding out at a ranch (1966).

It Happened One Summer (xxx), on 5 at 3 p.m. The story of an Iowa farm family who encounter love and adventure while at the state fair. A thin plot, delightfully thickened with the Rodgers and Hammerstein tunes (1945).

Agent for H.A.R.M. (x), on 11 at 10:30 p.m. Secret agent is assigned to protect the life of a defecting scientist. Routine iron curtain cloak-and-dagger melodrama (1965).

I Walk the Line (xxx), on 4 at 11:30 p.m. Interesting drama set in the moonshine country of Tennessee. Tuesday Weld's performance as a young girl who captivates married Sheriff Gregory Peck is the main inducement for watching this story about bootleggers' runs and run-ins with the law (1970).

That Certain Summer (xx-xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30 p.m. Hal Holbrook gives a devastatingly touching performance as a homosexual who is confronted with the torment of discovering that his 14-year-old son has found out about him. Scott Jacoby brings a naturalness to the difficult role of the son (1972).

Diary of a mad Housewife (xxxx) on 6 at midnight. Entertaining, perceptive drama boasts marvelous performance by Carrie Snodgrass as a bored New York housewife-mother, and Frank Langella as a dashing, successful and thoroughly selfish writer with whom she has an affair. Excellent dissection of a modern urban marriage (1970).

A Severed Head (xx), on 8 at midnight. A taint of flat champagne remains after talented cast (Lee Remick, Richard Attenborough, Claire Bloom) works very hard to be sophisticated and chic during multiple indiscretions among the British upper crust (1971).

S.O.S. Pacific (xx), on 7 at 1:05 a.m. Middling study of human nature when plane crashed on nuclear test island and survivors include Eddie Constantine, Pier Angeli and Eva Bartok (1960).

SUSAN SULLIVAN plays Maggie Porter, beautiful and strong-willed lawyer, who is romantically involved with Rudy Jordache, central figure in Rich Man, Poor Man, and Kimberly Beck portrays her wilful teenage daughter, Diane. Tuesdays on 4 and 13 at 9 p.m.

The Mudlark (xxx), on 6 at 2 a.m. Interesting and charming story about a young orphan who manages to smuggle himself into Windsor Castle to meet Queen Victoria. Irene Dunn is Queen Victoria, with Andrew Ray perfect as the boy. Alec Guinness plays Disraeli to the bilt (1951).

The Swinging City (xx), on 8 at 2:30 a.m. Michael Bentine as a pigeon fancier wanders through London meeting various eccentrics, including Terry-Thomas (1966).

Today's Highlights

Sunrise Semester, on 7 at 6:30 a.m. Religious and Civilizations of the Near East — the languages are studied.

Muppet Show, on 2 at 6 p.m. A horror house in Transylvania is visited with guest Vincent Price.

Mike Douglas, on 7 at 6:30 p.m. Guests include co-host David Brenner and Phyllis Diller.

Wolfman Jack — Variety, on 2 at 7:30 p.m. Susan Jacks, Del Shannon and Jose Feliciano perform some of their hits.

World in Action, on 9 at 7:30 p.m. America's massive sales of grain to the USSR have been plagued by reports of underweight and adulterated shipments. Allegations of fraud are traced in this report.

Copland on America — Music Special, on 9 at 8 p.m. Composer-conductor Aron Copland conducts the Minnesota Orchestra in a concert featuring the music of American composers.

Documentary Showcase, on 9 at 10 p.m. Going Past Go: An Essay on Sexism and how it affects men and women.

25th Anniversary for Bandstand

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dick Clark was the baby-faced emcee of "American Bandstand" almost a quarter century ago and today he remains the baby-faced host of the indestructible music show.

Clark hosts for two hours of ABC-TV's prime time Feb. 4 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of "Bandstand" which, along with Lawrence Welk and a couple of soap operas, is among television's longest running shows.

Adult viewers who have accidentally tuned in over the interminable run of show can see nothing has changed. Not the rampant acne. Not the indecipherable lyrics. Not the ear-splitting amplification of electric guitars.

Even Clark's expressionless boredom, his indifference to the cacophony and wild gyrations surrounding him, remains precisely the same.

But hold! Clark, an exceedingly bright and articulate man, says only he and the format are unchanged.

Actually, Clark was not the show's first emcee. For its first four years the show was hosted by other persons.

"When I took over in 1956 Jerry Vale, Georgia Gibbs and Don Cornell were the big music stars," said Clark who was having lunch in a sports shirt. The only time he wears tie and jacket is on the show where he symbolizes the terminal square.

"There was no rock and roll in those days. We played popular music, and were living in the age of Patti Page and Johnny Ray — both of whom, incidentally, will star in our anniversary show.

"And don't forget, the show used to come from Philadelphia and run two and a half hours every day. When we moved to Hollywood in 1964 we cut down to one hour, one show a week."

Clark is convinced the music has improved, if only because there is so much more music around to choose from. But he's not a critic and doesn't select the songs played on the air.

His own tastes run to the likes of "Misty," which would probably clear the hall of the teenagers who come to dance on the show. He plays songs viewers want to hear as reflected in the record magazine charts.

The dancers range in age from 14 to 20. Some gain a modicum of fame by appearing regularly on the show to dance and watch Clark interview a musical celebrity.

"The guests don't matter and neither do I," said Clark. "What makes the show are the kids, the dancing and the music. I'm just a finger pointer.

"I've been the caretaker of the show. I've promoted it, fended off program assassins at the network who wanted to kill it, tinkerers who tried to 'improve' it, sold it to sponsors and protected it.

"'Bandstand' can stay on indefinitely as long as a caretaker is around to watch over it."

The first star to emerge from the show back in the early 1950s was Joni James. But virtually hundreds of stars have appeared with Clark over the years and hundreds more have been represented by their music.

"Our anniversary show will feature 112 stars," Clark said. "Some will be performing live. Others will be seen on tape or film. They represented the 50s, 60s and 70s."

Among the performers will be the Everly Brothers, Johnny Cash, Barry Manilow, Sonny and Cher, Helen Reddy, Paul Anka, Elton John and David Bowie. Paul Williams will conduct a 25-piece band composed of some of the finest pop musicians in contemporary music.

Asked to account for the fact that he and Boone have retained their youthful appearances over the years, Clark shrugged and said, "it can't be our preference of beverages. Pat drinks milk. I drink whisky."

Chubby Checker will be on hand to revive "The Twist" which Clark said is the all-time holder for length of time at the top of the charts. The first television appearance of the Jefferson Airplane will be rerun, along with the initial "Bandstand" appearance of the Mamas and Papas.

Film clips of the kids who danced on the show 20 years ago, now in their 30s, will be matched up with recent footage taken of them.

"More than 8,300 musical performances have been presented on our show since we began," he said. "That represents several thousand performers.

"Young stars keep cropping up and more music is being written every year. I can't foresee any shortage of material for 'American Bandstand' in the years ahead."

Nor is there any reason to suspect Clark will be any less baby-faced when the show celebrates its golden anniversary in the year 2002.

CHUBBY CHECKER and Cher will join some 110 other stars in a two-hour celebration of American Bandstand's 25th anniversary on Channel 4 Friday at 9 p.m.

Too Late Blues (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Glum, unpleasant story of a jazz musician who steals the affections of a blonde from his friend.

Spanish Affair (xx), on 13 at 2 p.m. Practically non-existant plot about an American architect falling for a secretary in Spain is used as an excuse for some breathtaking scenery. (1957).

Geronimo (xx), on 5 at 3 p.m. Exciting Indians-on-the-warpath, with Chuck Connors satisfactory in the title role. (1962).

The Adventures of Frontier Freemont (xx), on 5 at 8 p.m. Magnificent scenery and animal sequences pad out a rather thin plot of pioneering in the mid-west U.S. Dan Haggerty, Denver Pile. (1976).

Death Wish (xx), on 8 at 9 p.m. Melodrama hinges on one man's war against the muggers of Manhattan after his wife is killed and his daughter raped. Charles Bronson. (1974).

Cage Without a Key (xx), on 12 at 9 p.m. Susan Dey plays the part of a teen-ager wrongly convicted of murder and sent to a badly-run penal institution. (1975).

Today's Highlights

Spotlight on Movies

The Greatest Show on Earth (xxxx), on 11 at 10:30 p.m. Cecil B. DeMille goes to the circus, resulting in the big top show to end them all. Super-splendiferous production of circus life captures all the thrills and excitement, plus a story line that holds it all together capably. (1952).

A Matter of Wife . . . and Death (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30 p.m. Rod Taylor, Joe Santos and Eddie Firestone are involved as a private eye searches for the murderers of an old friend. (1975).

That Certain Summer (xx-xx), on 6 at midnight. See Tuesday Spotlight on Movies.

The Imposter (xx), on 8 at midnight. Paul Hecht, a former intelligence officer, agrees to impersonate a wealthy businessman who has killers on his trail. Meredith Baxter, Edward Asner, John Vernon. (1975).

Major Dundee (xx), on 7 at 1:04 a.m. Charlton Heston is the cavalry major who rounds up a motley crew of deserters and Confederate prisoners to go off a dangerous mission tracking down Apaches. Excellent begining, then goes off in all directions. (1965).

Please Stand by for Murder (xx), on 6 at 1:30 a.m. Thriller-mystery is set in a closed down TV station, where Shirley Knight, as an alleged murderer, is terrorized by an unseen killer. (1975).

Savage (xx), on 8 at 1:30 a.m. Martin Landeau is a journalist enmeshed in political intrigue as he follows the route of a photograph compromising a U.S. supreme court appointee. (1973).

The Baby (xx), on 6 at 2:45 a.m. Social worker who gets too deeply involved in a man-child case has to kill to keep "baby" at home with her. Anjanette Comer, Ruth Roman, Mariana Hill. (1973).

The Creeping Terror (x), on 8 at 3 a.m. Even science fiction fans will find it difficult to stay awake right through this story of a space monster invading a small town. (1964).

Spotlight on Movies

Passage West (x), on 8 at 1 p.m. Outlaws join up with a wagon train led by a preacher, with predictable results. (1951.)

Submarine Command (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Moderatly entertaining Korean war drama with good performances by William Holden as the submarine commander who is plagued with self-doubt about his part in a past incident whch cost some men their lives. Rather slow, but it should hold your interest. (1951.)

A Soldier Named Joe (x), on 13 at 2 p.m. A U.S. soldier deserts in Italy, then finds himself involved with the Roman underworld. (1970.)

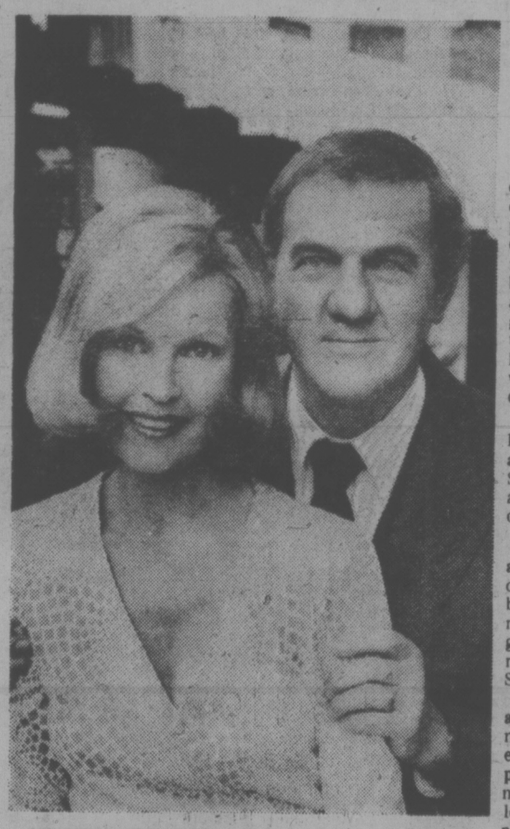
The World of Henry Orient (xxxx), on 5 at 3 p.m. A rare combination of humor and sensitivity makes this comedy very special. It tells a wacky story about a madly egocentric and overly amorous concert pianist, Peter Sellers, who is hilariously purused all around New York by two teenage fans. The adoring girls are brilliantly and naturally played by Tippy Walker and Merrie Spaeth, and they steal the picture right from under the noses of Peter Sellers and a fine company of actors including Angela Lansbury, Paula Prentiss, Tom Bosley and Phyllis Thaxter. (1964.)

Umberto D (xxxx), on 9 at 9 p.m. Italian director De Sica's masterpiece: shattering study of a lonely old man, succumbing to the ravages of age. Packs an uncompromising wallop. One of the most remarkable films made. (1955.)

Yesterday's Child (xx), on 5 at 9:30 p.m. A convoluted plot, based on the problems that occur when the child of a wealthy family suddenly turns up 14 years after she was kidnapped. Stephanie Zimbalist, Shirley Jones, Ross Martin. (1977.)

The High Commissioner (xx), on 12 at 9:30 p.m. Dogged Australian sleuth Rod Taylor arrives in London to arrest a political bigwig for murder. Mystery never quite r3aches its goal, despite a cast including Christopher Plummer, Lilli Palmer, Franchot Tone and Camilla Sparv. (1969.)

The Fighting Seebees (xxx), on 11 at 11 p.m. Tough construction foreman John Wayne and navy man Dennis O'Keefe organize a work battalion to work close to Japanese enemy lines. Rousing war drama, loaded with action and Susan Hayward. (1944.)



LT. MIKE STONE (Karl Malden) is pleased as punch to have tracked down a missing woman (Marian Mason), believed by police to have been murdered by her husband, in The Streets of San Francisco, Thursday on 4 and 8 at 10 p.m.

Carry on Matron (xx), on 6 at midnight. More madcap ribaldry from the Carry On gang, this time in a maternity hospital. As usual, interest wanes after about an hour, except for some hearty chuckles. (1972.)

Drive Hard, Drive Fast (xx), on 8 at midnight. An auto drama geared to scare. Racing pilot Brian Kelly drives Joan Collins home to New Orleans from Mexico City in her husband's sports car, and is tailed all the way. Henry Silva, glowering with satisfaction, is the menacing pursuer who listens to all the couple's conversations through a bugging device. (1969.)

The Story of Pretty Boy Floyd (xx), on 7 and 12 at 12:40 a.m. A farm boy, Martin Sheen, becomes a bank robber and infamous killer druing the depression era. (1974.)

Among the Living (xx), on 2 at 1 a.m. Man is wrongfully accused when his insane twin brother escapes and commits murder. Strong thriller has good direction and performances by Albert Dekker, Susan Hayward. (1941.)

A Reflection of Fear (x), on 6 at 2 a.m. Thin Psycho-type mystery as a young girl's alter ego goes on a murderous rampage which is viewed with dismay by her parents and the local sheriff. The striking photography is hindered by the worn-out plot. (1973.)

The Gallant Hours (xx), on 8 at 2 a.m. James Cagney's restrained performance as Admiral Halsey is the only worthwhile thing about this otherwise routine war film, based on actual events in the South Pacific campaign. (1960.)

Under the Yum Yum Tree (xx), on 7 at 2:15 a.m. Good fun, Broadway comedy transfers to the screen with ease, thanks to Jack Lemmon's energetic performance as an amorous landlord. Carol Lynley is cute as one of Lemmon's tenants trying to keep her boyfriend at bay. (1963.)

Today's Highlights

Merv Griffin, on 12 at noon Psychiatrist William Rader interviews five teenage runaways.

Peopleplace, on 4 at 7 p.m. A look at the impact of Canadian investments in the Seattle area.

Lawrence Welk, on 6 at 7 p.m. Favorites from the 40's is the theme. Songs include My Foolish Heart, That Old Black Magic and I Wish I Didn't Love You So.

How the West Was Won—debut, on 8 at 7:30 p.m. A three-part saga about pioneer life through the eyes of a family homesteading on the Great Plains. James Arness stars as frontiersman Zeb Macahan.

Spotlight on Movies

Doctor in Trouble (xx), on 8 at 12:30 p.m. Fair entry in the British comedy series concerns Dr. (Leslie) Phillips's problems when he stows away on an ocean liner, good supporting cast of James Robertson Justice, Harry Secombe, Angela Scoular and Robert Morley help a bit. (1970).

Red Mountain (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Well-made western moves at a fast clip as Confederate officer discovers his leader is out for himself alone and goes on the hunt for him. Alan Ladd, Lizabeth Scott, John Ireland. (1951).

Git! (xx), on 13 at 2 p.m. Runaway orphan trains an English setter to become a fine hunting dog. Harmless little boy and dog drama with Jack Champlain and Heather North. (1965).

A High Wind in Jamaica (xxx), on 5 at 3 p.m. Good adventure drama with fine acting by Anthony Quinn and James Coburn. Quinn is the captain of a pirate vessel which captures some children and the crew off another vessel. It turns into a stark drama before the climax and never lets up until the tragic ending. (1965).

Wee Geordie (xxx), on 12 at 9 p.m. Charming comedy about a scrawny Scottish boy who grows up into a big brawny man after sending for a British Charles Atlas body building course. Bill Travers is perfect, and gets good support from a marvelous cast which includes Alistair Sim.

Dead of Night (xxxx), on 13 at 11 p.m. A man who has had a strange dream visits in the country, where other guests relate how some dreams of theirs have had basis in fact. Fine spine-tingling episodic thriller, a true suspense-rouser. Michael Redgrave, Googie Withers, Mervyn Johns. (1946).

Torture Garden (xx), on 7 at 11:30 p.m. Some eerie tales are spun by a sinister doctor, Burgess Meredith, at a side show. Best: the first one, about a cat's evil presence. Worst: the last, with a hammy Jack Palance performance. (1968).

Cancel My Reservation (xx), on 12 at 11:30 p.m. Bob Hope and Eva Marie Saint are caught up in a zany murder mystery. (1972).

The Confession (xxxx), on 6 at midnight. Emotionally shattering drama about contemporary politics, brilliantly directed by Costa-Gavras. Stands as one of the most powerful and intellectually compelling anti-Communist films ever made. Based on a book by a survivor of the 1952 purges in Czechoslovakia. There's none of the puerile sloganeering drivel found in most American 'anti-Communist' movies. (1970).

Night Terror (xx), on 8 at midnight. A housewife, Valerie Harper, is caught in a maze of terror after witnessing a murder on a lonely stretch of highway late at night. (1977).

The Black Torment (xx), on 13 at 12:30 a.m. Nobleman John Turner returns with his second wife to his estate to find ghostly goings on and accusations of witchcraft against him. Spoo costume thriller whips up share of suspense with Heath Sears and Ann Lynn. (1964).

Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabba Patch (xxx), on 2 at 1 a.m. W. C. Fields, with more sto than Fields. A melodrama of poor woman about to l evicted. Some of the domest scenes with Fields and Za Pitts are priceless. (1934).

The Curse of the Fly (x), o at 1:20 a.m. Rusty thriller fin Brian Donlevy struggling wi the intricacies of the four dimension and assorte weirdos. (1965).

Chastity (xx), on 8 at 1 a.m. Interesting story of g who takes to the road to fi life on her own. Cher in so acting debut is surprising good. (1969).

The Devil's Daughter (x), 6 at 2:45 a.m. Occult hoku about a sweet young girl who soul has been sold to the dev (1972).

Revolt at Fort Laram (xx), on 8 at 3:15 a.m. Arm fort is split upon the outbre of the U.S. Civil War, with t commander torn betwe loyalty to the south and du as an officer. Pretty fa western with some good acti by John Dehner. (1957).

A Beautiful Killing (xx), on at 4:15 a.m. Private detectiv Christopher George and Lyn Day George are involved in spree of murder and blackm at a fashionable health sp (1974).

GOING PAST GO — ALARMING FACTS

Going Past Go, an examination of how sexism affects women and men in all social, political and economic areas, and how home and school reinforce sexist attitudes within the society, will air on channel 9 Tuesday, Feb. 1 at 10 p.m. This entry into Documentary Showcase also looks at sibtleties in school textbooks, and early childhood stereotyping of children.

Produced by KOCE-Huntington Beach, Going Past Go presents some alarming statistics on the earning power of women:

Women in scientific occupations earn 25% less than men — Women factory workers earn 61% less than men — Women in technical/professional fields earn 34% less than men.

The documentary includes candid interviews with academicians, psychologists, government officials, beauty pageant contestants and feminists, giving their differing views on sexism. Going Past Go also demonstrates how advertising and movies have stereotyped both men and women.

"What is sexism?" says Paul Cabbell, reporter and writer of Going Past Go. "It is prejudice masquerading as effecting, discrimination disguised as protection, tradition dressed up as freedom. The problem, in short, is a battle against an age-old phenomenon that today we call — sexism."

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Julie Manages Two "Careers"

By STEVEN H. SCHEUER

NEW YORK (KFS) — Charming, blonde and lovely Julie Montgomery is a 16-year-old high school honor student in her hometown in New Jersey and also Samantha Vernon in "One Life to Live" (ABC). It is surprising that a young lady of such tender years can manage both careers with an ease and professionalism that would throw some of her co-workers in the soap world.

Julie was born in Kansas City, Mo., and came East when her dad took a position with a New York City firm. Her career aspirations came to the fore when she was 11 and landed a part in her junior high school's presentation of "The Sound of Music."

At 14, Julie's pretty looks and photogenic qualities made her a natural for modelling and she still takes modelling jobs from time to time. As if all her activities don't keep her busy enough, Julie was elected last July to represent teenagers in her town, and she serves in this capacity at many civic and social functions. Julie is a very busy young lady.

When "Days of Our Lives" (NBC) celebrated its 11th year on the air in mid-January with a birthday party after its 2,826th episode, Ed Mallory was in a reminiscing mood, recalling his move over from the role of Bill Riley in "Morning Star" to become Dr. Bill Horton back in 1966.

Mallory had no idea he would play Bill Horton for what seems like forever, surviving four Laura Hortons over the distance. Ed remembers the first Laura, fragile Floy Dean, a "Morning Star" colleague who was regarded as "too soft" for the role of Dr. Laura. Blonde, tall Susan Flannery was more like it — strong. After an eight-year run, Susan departed to be replaced by good actress Susan Oliver, who gave way last summer to tall, blonde Rosemary Forsyth.

As Dr. Bill, Ed was asked to test with all the aspiring Lauras. Big ones, little ones — all shapes and sizes — have played the highly romanticized love scene between Bill and Laura, with Mallory taking home extra pay for the tests. Some weeks Ed made more money on tests than he did on the show. Ed realizes how cold it can be on the outside, working with the eager aspirants for the role of Laura, and he has mixed feelings about ever leaving "Days."

Over the years, Dr. Bill has "mellowed," says Ed. "His inner fires have been quenched. Bill was an outspoken surgeon, and usually misunderstood. He used to get around more, and he knew everybody on the show. With the hour format which means no rehearsal the day before, and the larger case, everything's changed. When I hear stage directions now it seems that Bill is either behind, or to the rear of Laura. 'To the rear' stings a bit. I yell 'Can't you say 'follows'."

Jennifer Harmon, who is Cathy Lord in "One Life to Live," was in a florist shop in Manhattan's recently when a woman verbally began attacking her for Cathy's deeds on the soap. To refresh your memory, Cathy is currently suffering from amnesia and therefore can't recall where she deposited Joe and Viki Riley's newborn infant whom she kidnapped.

The woman shopper was screaming at Jennifer to return the baby to the distraught parents. Meanwhile, the shop's proprietor, not being a soap opera fan, thought the accusations were on the level and was about ready to call the police, when Jennifer finally calmed the irate viewer by reminding her it was only play acting and not real life. Who says doap opera fans don't get involved?

CHANNEL CHATTER

Judith Barcrott, who plays Anne Tyler Martin in "All My Children" (ABC), will be off the show for a short while. She had to go home to Boyce, Va., to attend her mother's funeral and console her father, who is a retired Episcopalian minister. During Judith's absence, her role will be taken by Beverly Owen . . . Don Stewart, who is Mike Bauer of "The Guiding Light" (CBS), and John McCook, who is Lance Prentiss of "The Young and the Restless" (CBS), are in Atlanta, Ga., this weekend to entertain at the Men's Fashion Association's Spring-Summer Press Preview. Both actors sing very well and they will probably raise their voices in song as well as sport some of the fashions.

PLOT PORTENTS

On "All My Children," Linc and Kitty trek to Hollywood in their quest of Mrs. Carpenter's whereabouts. More heartache is in store for Tara and Phil when Little Philip refuses to come home, preferring to stay with grandmother Phoebe Tyler and Chuck. Also, Benny makes his first entrance wearing the chauffeur's uniform that Phoebe personally selected.

Over on "The Young and the Restless," the medical board is looking into the death of William Foster. Son Snapper comes before the board to testify on just who pulled the plug of the senior Foster's respirator. Liz Foster is frantic, knowing Snapper will probably shoulder the blame for the act of mercy.

"General Hospital" (ABC) bulletins relay an upbeat note this week. Jeff is recovering from brain surgery; Leslie learns that her long lost daughter, Laura, is alive and well in Canada; and Mary Ellen Dante has recovered enough to be released from the institution. As a welcome home gesture, Dr. Mark Dante wants the apartment redecorated by his burning love, Terri.

"Days of Our Lives" zeroes in on noble Mike, a man willing to take the rap for Jack's murder by his daughter Trish. On the lam, Mike is found hiding in Mickey's barn and lawyer Mickey finally persuades Mike to turn himself over to the authorities.

WHILE 16-year-old Julie Montgomery has "One Life to Live" (ABC) role as Samantha Vernon, she lives another full life as a high school honor student off-camera; and Edward Mallory is into his second decade as Dr. Bill Horton in "Days of Our Lives" (NBC).

Stars Dramatic Photo Effect

By JERRY WINDLE

Perhaps one of the more dramatic effects you can add to photographs is stars.

Yes, stars. In the photo a point of light is formed into a perfect four or eightpoint star. A bit of luck on the part of the photographer? Hardly.

You may have made a picture with a star in it when getting a bright reflection or sharp point of light in your photograph. But that was a lucky accident.

However, professional photographers can't wait for luckly accidents. When they want a star effect in their pictures they merely add a cross-star or, as it is better known, a "star" filter.

The star filter takes the light entering the lens from a point source and scatters it in an orderly fashion.

Actually, the star filter is nothing more than a clear piece of optical glass which has had tiny lines etched into its surface in perpendicular lines. So the surface is a network of right-angle lines.

This effect can give a jewel-like appearance to a scene. Take a close look at the picture of the boat.

You can see larger stars which are formed from lights on shore. In this case, we see larger light sources will produce larger stars.

We also find that the brighter and smaller the point source of lights, the greater the light scattering effect will be.

The choice of lens also will have an effect on the final star effect in a picture. Try a 50mm to 135mm lens on a 35mm camera for the best results. A wide-angle lens tends to make the stars appear much smaller. The longer the focal length, the longer the points of the star.

The single lens reflex and the star filter make a good working combination because you can see the exact effect as it will appear in the final picture. You can rotate the star filter to change the direction of the star, making the points go in whatever direction you like.

Since the filter cuts your exposure by about one-half an f-stop, you can stack two filters to create an eight point star effect. This is done by putting the filters together so their points go in different directions. Again you can check the final effect in your viewfinders before you expose your film.

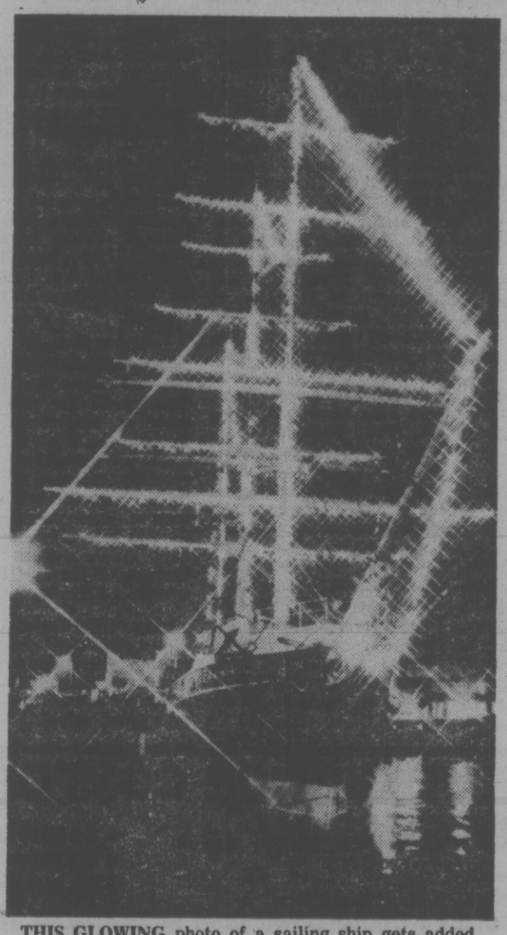
If you don't think your budget can afford a star filter right now, don't despair. There is a way. Any screened material placed before the lens will produce a "star" effect. Ordinary window screening works very well.

There also is another version of the star filter called a "spectral star filter." This is especially effective in shooting color pictures. For not only does the filter give the star effect, but it also breaks down the color into its primary colors, giving a rainbow effect to the points of the star.

When making your exposure (especially at night) and shooting with the star filter, use the same setting you would normally use for a night shot and let the star filter take care of itself.

It is possible to use the star filter in daylight, using it to create a star effect on a point reflection such as the sun on a car bumper on reflection on the surface of water. Again, check your viewfinder to see what kind of effect you are getting before making the final exposure.

Remember, you will be shooting into a bright reflection so be sure of the exposure. Beware of exposing only for the highlight and the star, because the rest will go black.



THIS GLOWING photo of a sailing ship gets added drama from being shot through a star filter. Larger light sources form larger stars, as seen in the difference between stars formed by lights on shore and those smaller ones aboard the Star of India.

Record Reviews

PAUL McCARTNEY
. . . nearly perfect souvenir

WINGS: "Wings Over America" (Capitol SWCO-11593). ★★★

As a souvenir of Paul McCartney's first American tour with his post-Beatles band, "Wings Over America" is nearly perfect. Not a song of the Wings concert has been left out, almost all of the surprises are pleasant, the band's toughness is firmly established and the record includes all of the major non-Beatles McCartney songs. Its vastness makes it somewhat unmanageable — hearing it straight through can feel like a project more than a pleasure — but as three-record sets go, I find McCartney and company's straightforward approach much preferable to Stevie Wonder's obliqueness. But there are problems even in this. It's hard to believe that Paul McCartney takes his work no more seriously than this randomly organized, almost static presentation. Like the concerts themselves, "Wings Over America" lacks any kind of dramatic build — Side One could as easily be Side Five, Side Three the beginning rather than the middle. Still, maybe this lack of cohesiveness makes its own point — perhaps Paul McCartney views his body of work as merely a jumble of songs. Take 'em or leave 'em. This is disconcerting, but I find myself picking up the former option more frequently as time goes by.

KIM CARNES: "Sailin" ((A&M SP-4606).★★★★

Co-producer Jerry Wexler has always had a way with women singers — Aretha Franklin, Dusty Springfield, Luly and 'Sailin' " is his best work with white funk since the memorable "Dusty in Memphis" nearly a decade ago. Because Carnes has a husky, sometimes raspy voice, the obvious comparison is to Rod Stewart. They even share a common song — Barry Goldberg and Gerry Goffin's "It's Not the Spotlight." But Carnes has a somewhat lighter touch, as evidenced on Van Morrison's "Warm Love." There is some unevenness here, principally because the writing of Carnes and her collaborators is not always first rate. But the tracks, — by the muscle Shoals rhythm section and horns, primarily — are always propulsive, and the listening is consistently pleasurable. This is far stronger, in fact, than almost any of the similar attempts which have emerged from Hollywood and environs recently.

MILLIE JACKSON: "Lovingly Yours" (Spring SP-1-6712). ★★★

Jackson's last few albums have been sustained by conceptual role-playing — alternatively, she has been the risque divorcee and the aggrieved wife. A piquant approach, but hardly one that could have lasted forever. "Lovingly Yours" drops the thematic organization, but is equally bold — Jackson remains a really top-flight and intelligent R&B singer. and the best material still comes from unlikely sources — Ned Doheny's "A Love of Your own," and overworked Allen Toussaint's "I'll Be Rolling (With the Punches)." This is probably the best record to emerge from Philadelphia in the past year, and well worth checking out for admirers of the genre.

"General Johnson" (Arista 4082). ★★★★

An excellent, eclectic group of songs from the author of "It Will Stand" and "Patches," hits from the '60s and early '70s. Johnson's influences now seem to range from Sly Stone to the O'Jays, Chi-Lites and especially the Spinners. The most moving number — aside from a remake of "Patches" — is a similarly autobiographical "All in the Family," which describes a destitute urban equivalent of that earlier rural story. An underrated performer who must not be overlooked — soul music in the classic mold.

Collectibles

By JOHN HEARN

We must be thankful that postal services were maintained through the Christmas season even if deliveries were a little sketchy. I do hope that all of you who ordered copies of my book, Nostalgia, received them in time — although in some instances I fear we only just made it. If perchance there are any which did not arrive, please let me know right away and I will make what redress I can.

I am going to plug another Canadian collector book this week — Canada's Quilts by Mary Conroy. There is a major revival in quilt making going on and enthusiasts will find this book a gem. Ms. Conroy says in her preface that she wrote it because she was angry; everything written on the subject suggested that quilting was an American and European folk art and nothing original was to be found in Canada. Knowing this to be nonsense she decided to do something about it and with the help of a Canada Council grant, spent five years researching the history of the quilt in this country. The result is a book which is as fascinating as it is informative. Here are some snippets which I emjoyed.

An Acadian girl was not permitted to marry until she could weave a piece of cloth.

Among the pioneers, a girl started her first quilt at the age of six and was expected to have thirteen of them in her dower chest when she married. The last one, the bridal quilt bore symbils of longevity and fertility. It was considered bad luck to start the bridal quilt until there was a prospect of a marriage and in some parts of Canada it was bad luck for a girl to work on her own bridal quilt — friends and neighbors would make it for her.

A piece of cloth enjoyed several lives. It might start off as a man's jacket, be cut down to make coats for succession of children and wind up in a quilt. A pioneer wife could often trace the history of a piece of cloth back through sixty years.

Quilting bees in New Brunswick were called "frolics". Fine needlework in earlier times was often done by the light of lard-oil lamps or candles.

Ms. Conroy's book brings the history of the Canadian quilt right up to date. Her illustrations are excellent and many are in color. She describes the famous and less well-known designs and concludes with 15 tracing patterns. Canada's Quilts sells for $7.75 plus 50c postage and may be obtained directly from Mary Conroy, 360 Stewart Drive, Sudbury, Ont. P3E 3R8. I am sure she would sign it for you if you wished.

John Hearn will be pleased to hear your comments on collectibles. Mail can be sent c-o Box 4090 Station A. Toronto. M5W 1M9.

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — When the late baseball great "Dizzy" Dean called Roy Acuff "King of Country Music," he bestowed a title which stuck only because it was deserved.

Since "about 1932," as Acuff remembers it, the Grand Ole Opry's veteran star, a man who originally hoped to be a professional baseball player, has been winning such avid fans with songs like "The Great Speckled Bird" and "Wabash Cannon Ball" that he once was urged to run for governor of Tennessee.

However, Acuff insists, he's not irreplaceable and he's learned that he's not indestructible, because he suffered a major heart attack several months ago and is only recently recovered.

He'd just finished a matinee performance at the Grand Ole Opry House at Opryland here and was in his dressing room resting as he reflected upon future possibilities.

"I want to stay with the Grand Ole Opry as long as I can," Acuff said. "I hope to stay with it as long as I'm an asset. But when the time comes that the Opry doesn't need Roy Acuff, then I'm ready to say, 'Thank you,' and step down."

Amazingly, the man who is to country music what Elvis Presley is to rock and Frank Sinatra to pop didn't sing a note professionally until he was almost 30 years old.

Born in Union County, Tenn., Acuff was a three-letter high school athlete who dreamed of the day he'd join Babe Ruth in the ranks of baseball's major leaguers.

And, in fact, he tried out for a professional club but, during the tryouts, suffered a trio of sunstrokes which foreclosed professional baseball as a career.

His father, a missionary Baptist preacher and lawyer, played fiddle and owned a collection of great mountain fiddle music which inspired Roy to teach himself to play.

He became so adept that, with a baseball career out of the question, he joined a medicine show travelling through Virginia and Tennessee.

This led to his first recording date in 1934 and to broadcasts over two Knoxville radio stations. Three years later, he joined the Grand Old Opry with which he's been a major attraction for almost 40 years.

Though his recent illness almost took his life, it didn't change his outlook, Acuff said when he was asked how his heart attack had affected his philosophy.

"I don't think it's changed me any," he said slowly, thinking carefully about his answer, "because I've always lived knowing that someday I'd have to leave here.

Acuff made no bargains with God while he was desperately ill, because, as he explained, "then, I think, it was a little late. If a person wants to find God, well, He's there. You don't have to go searching, because He's with us all the time. The trouble is some people don't realize it. There's a time and place for all things, but God is present everywhere, always."

While he's always conscious of God's presence, Acuff pointed out, he never preaches from the Grand Ole Opry stage.

"I'm here to entertain the Grand Ole Opry audiences," he said, "so I don't think I should go out on the stage and confess and testify. The people who come to see me have their own churches they go to and their own ways of worshiping.

"So, when I hit that stage, I don't say, 'Now let's all have a prayer.'

"On the other hand, if people can see Christianity in what I do, that's great."

Changing the subject, Acuff said the numbers his audiences request most are, "The Great Speckled Bird" and "Wabash Cannon Ball."

"I won't say I get tired of doing them," he said, "but I sometimes wonder if people don't think they are the only songs I know when actually I probably know more songs than anyone else on the Opry.

"I could stand here and sing hundreds and hundreds of songs.

"And I'll keep singing as long as people want to hear me. But, if they get tired of me, I won't force myself on the audiences or the Grand Ole Opry."

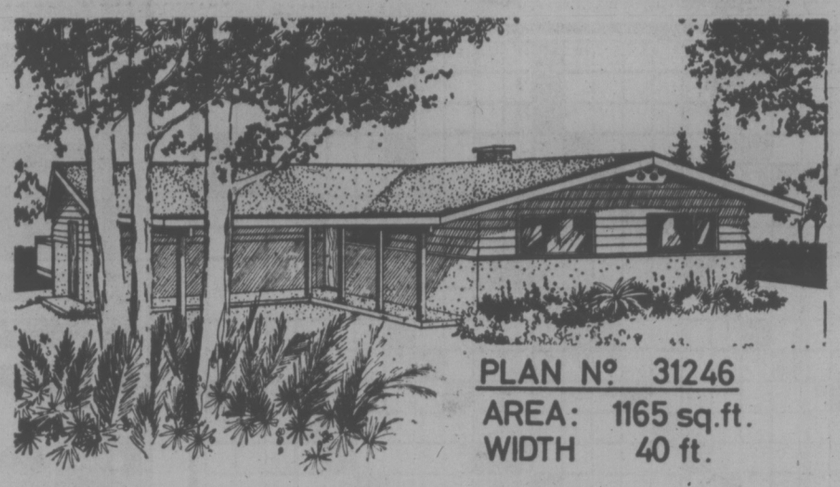
Home of the Week



PLAN Nº 31246
AREA: 1165 sq.ft.

Compact Family Home

A compact family home of three bedrooms, with the benefits of good design evident everywhere is this economical basement bungalow, and ideal for a building site sloping to the rear.

The exterior is a contrast of horizontal siding and stucco. A single carport creates a protected walk-way to the front entry.

Featuring a wood burning fireplace the living room is well designed for furniture placement and comfortable living. A large, rear view, picture window covers one wall and there is easy access to the dining and kitchen areas.

Compact and "U" shaped, the conventint kitchen contains all the latest equipment and serves as a complete utilitarian centre for food preparation. Close at hand is a family dining room and for quick snacks the kitchen counter can be used as a bar.

At the back door is a flight of stairs to the large unfinished basement. There is plenty of space here for extra bedrooms, recreation room with fireplace, and a utility room with washer and dryer. The basement could also be accessible direct from the grade at the rear if built on a sloping lot.

A two piece ensuite in the master bedroom has a convenient space saving pocket door. The remaining bedrooms are serviced, from the inner hall, by a full size bathroom which also doubles as the guest powder room.

Plans for design No. 31246 may be obtained at a cost of $45 for the first set and $8 for each additional set, plus $3 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include seven per cent sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs, Series 32, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus more than 300 quality home plans of every type available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling.)

To order these items please send cheque or money order payable to Home of the Week. Address your orders to Home of the week, c/o Victoria Press Ltd., 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V5Y 1R2.

Hollywood Hotline

HOLLYWOOD — "John is directing, so he's as happy as a pig in mud," said Patty Duke Astin who could have said the same about herself.

For Patty, whose childhood and teen years were hectic and often unhappy, has been beaming almost without letup since she married actor-director John Astin several years ago.

She works regularly, most recently in "The Captains and the Kings" for NBC-TV, but she's first and foremost Mrs. Astin and mother of five sons, three from John's first marriage.

And, for this reason, she doesn't act as often as she might because Patty refuses to take roles which might offend her family.

"Whenever I read a script," she said, "I consider whether I'd want the children to see me in the part that's been offered. That's my principal consideration.

PATTY DUKE ASTIN
. . . Choosey about roles

"Not long ago I was offered a script that was so beautifully written, that was such a challenge, that I was tempted to take the part even though I wasn't sure what the boys would think about it.

"Finally I gave the script to the older children and asked for their opinion.

"Well, they absolutely abhorred it.

"They said, 'Mom, this may be selfish of us, because this part may be very good for your career, but we don't want you to do it. We'd hate to walk into the theater in Westwood and see you on the screen in this role.'

"So I turned it down."

This doesn't mean, though, that Patty will only portray variations of Mary Poppins.

In a "Streets of San Francisco" segment this season, she played an homicidal revolutionary, so cold-blooded that, according to Mrs. Astin, "John said he was afraid to sleep with me after he saw that woman.

"I don't think the younger children (Sean, 5, and Mack, 3) even know John and I act," Patty added. "They think Mommy and Daddy do game shows for a living.

"If you were to ask Mack what I do, he'd say, 'She does "Tattletales" and "Match Game",'"

BARBARA FAIRCHILD
. . . son's Vegas debut

Fifteen-year-old Allen has definite acting ability, Patty thinks, and would like to be an actor.

Mooseketeer in the original "The Mickey Mouse Club" and try to find an agent for him," she said. "But then he broke an ankle playing football, and that was that.

"I wouldn't object to having a child actor in the family.

"Looking back on my life, I've decided that whether or not a child should act professionally depends upon the situation and the terrain.

"What the child's life will be depends upon who the parents are and how fulfilled they are in their own lives."

John and Patty (he calls her Anna) couldn't be more fulfilled.

"We're a couple of happy very average people," Patty said.

Humor is rather a scarce commodity today, all things considered. Even the annual Christmas publishing deluge produced but a trickle of humorous titles this year. I've just spent a few hours plodding through some of them and have come away convinced that while good humor may be devilishly hard to draw, it's even harder to write. For example:

Fred C. Dobbs, who is radio and TV broadcaster Michael Magee in a grey fright wig and baggy pin-stripes, has produced a collection of rambling monologues titled The Golden Age of B.S. (Gage, $7.95.) Dobbs gets off a good one every now and then and his targets are well chosen, but he's so long-winded he reminded me of a young man I once met whose nickname was "Motormouth".

According to Dobbs, the "golden age of B.S." began in the spring of 1975, during a speech by Pierre Trudeau at a Liberal fund-raising dinner. Dobbs' aim is to point out "credibility gaps" wherever they exist, but he does not limit himself to the Liberal Party.

"The thing I've noticed is that the system gets its protection from the very people that's being screwed by it," he will say. He lambastes the CBC, Canadian newspapers, the housing shortage, education, business and a dozen more. Here's one of his better comments: "Of course, if God meant us to fly he'd never have given us Air Canada."

Dobbs, who abhors the label "old age pensioner" and calls himself a "sexy senior citizen", saves his kind words for the likes of British tradition, Canada's war record and racehorses, especially racehorses. "We gotta laugh at ourselves" he says, by way of a prescription for what ails us, but The Golden Age of B.S. is not the book to show us how. Magee should stick to radio and TV.

Ben Wicks, in Ben Wicks' Canada (McClelland and Stewart, $5.95), fares little better. I can't quite figure out which market this book is aimed at, British or Canadian. On page 116, for instance, he states: "In the cab . . . We know it as a taxi." Here "We" means "We English". But on page 118 he states: "This, then, is Canada. Will there be room for our English saviours?"

The confusion may be more the result of muddled thinking than sloppy editing, for Wicks' spirtual home is somewhere in mid-Atlantic. His book is a manual for Englishmen who emigrate to Canada, when it's not being a sly dig in his Canadian readers' ribs. The cartoons, as always, are worth looking at twice, but Wicks' prose is so absurd it's dull. He, too, sounds better on TV.

Then there's Stanley Burke's Blood, Sweat and Bears (J.J. Douglas, $5.95), or swamp fable number three, illustrated by Roy Peterson. Burke's notion of humor revolves around names like "Fossil Spewitt," "John Bassethound" and "Dick Bedpan of the Goad and Flail."

His other problem is what can one say about hockey that hasn't already been said? Without Peterson's gleefully wicked caricatures to give him an assist, Burke might have had to play out the entire game without scoring a single goal. A dyed-in-the-woollies hockey fan might disagree, though. Peterson's left me good-natured enough to give it the benefit of the doubt.

Matters improve with The Leacock Medal Treasury, edited by Ralph L. Curry (Lester & Orpen, $11.95). This collection of 29 excerpts from 25 prize-winners spans three decades of humorous writing and demonstrates that a multitude of chuckles is a very good thing.

The only writer who made me laugh outright was Donald Jack, with his priceless description of Bandy's wedding night. But not to worry, there should be something here to satisfy most tastes. And I'm grateful to Curry for reminidng me to re-read Max Ferguson's memoirs and the Salterton novels of Robertson Davies, all of which can be highly recommended.

Finally, a word about Jim Unger, the until recently unknown art director for the Mississauga Times Weekly. From this unlikely base Unger shot to fame as the creator of "Herman", who is possibly the largest "little man" in the history of cartooning.

Unger's comic strip is syndicated in 110 newspapers in Canada and the U.S. For $2.75 (Gage) you can now own a collection of "Herman" cartoons titled "Apart from a little dampness, Herman, how's everything else?" The cover shows a business-like fellow addressing the hapless Herman, who is seated in a purple arm chair flanked by an aray of toadstools erupting from his carpet.

For what it's worth, I found "Herman" hilarious. I hope the reason was Unger's talent, and not weakness of the brain brought on by reading too much Canadian humor.

A Flawed Portrait Of Quebec's 'Dictator'

By WALTER YOUNG

Duplessis . . . his domination was complete

Conrad Black has written an enormous book, much of it not worth reading. The first 300 pages are largely a rehash of his Master's Thesis — which he candidly acknowledges — and while they cover the life of Duplessis chronologically from birth to 1944 they offer little in the way of insight into the man's early career.

For one thing Black spends more time on the politicians around Duplessis than on Duplessis himself. This is, one suspects, largely the result of insufficient source material for the period. Nevertheless the picture that emerges of a truly Florentine political system flourishing in 20th century Canada is instructive. Not, mind you, because the author makes anything of it, but instructive because of the mass of detail he presents.

The 20s and 30s in Quebec were decades in which the Liberal government under Taschereau made corruption a fine art, in which leaders expected and received from followers a kind of obedience complete with fulsome written declarations of fealty that would have struck Robert Walpole as anachronistic. It was also the time in which the power-hunger of Cardinal Villeneuve led him in directions more consistent with the behavior of 14th and 15th century princes of the church. It was during this period that Maurice Duplessis was learning his trade.

That he learned it quickly and well was shown in the manner in which he first consummated the union between the Conservative party — which he led — and the reformist Action Liberale Nationale, then led the new party to office and neatly dumped the three leading figures of the ALN. The Abbe Groulx was moved to describe it as a "uniquely dirty trick." Ironically, it was by revealing the corruption of the Liberal regime that Duplessis swept to power at the head of the Union Nationale in 1936. But he didn't reform the Taschereau system, he merely modified and improved it.

Unfortunately Black makes no attempt to analyse either the events or their influence on the emerging leader. He does, however, establish his own bias early by the insertion of occasional gratuitous swipes at those who were critical of Duplessis, particularly Liberals, liberals and others further left.

The second half of the book is thematically organized and more interesting. But here what one learns of Duplessis is borrowed largely from other writers, chiefly Pierre Laporte. The picture that is drawn is of a man able to exercise almost dictatorial powers by virtue of an alliance with the Church that was, to a great degree, damaging both to the Church and Quebec; and by virtue of the allegiance of men who were either completely cynical or totally without courage.

Although he lived frugally and died in debt, Duplessis managed a party fund that enabled the Union Nationale to spend close to $3 million on a provincial election campaign. He kept $60,000 in a medicine chest in his home in Trois Rivieres and would dole it out to the needy and sycophantic alike.

His domination of every aspect of government was complete. He would "distribute road-paving patronage off the top of his head, fixing prices and not even looking at a map. He inquired into the cost of individual school buildings, ordered the purchase of specific school texts, conducted investigations into the suitability of particular civil servants and policemen, and personally had the last and determining word before any liquor licence was granted, rejected, or revoked, anywhere in Quebec." He treated his own cabinet colleagues like children — one minister was banished from cabinet for a year, his resignations refused, and accepted back only after the minister grovelled before Le Chef. He ran the Assembly as though it were a private club; the rules of order were what Duplessis decided, when he decided.

Despite the overwhelming evidence that the man was the closest thing to a fascist dictator Canada has experienced, Black maintains he was a great leader and a boon to his province. He offers little to sustain this point of view beyond snide cracks at Duplessis' detractors. There can be no doubt that subsequent events in Quebec reflect the kind of pressure that inevitably built up during the repressive Duplessis regime. In many respects he was the classic roi negre; the imperialists who supported him were the Montreal Anglophone corporate elite and the right wing of the church — until the late fifties, a potent combination.

Serious students of Quebec politics should dip into this book because Black does amass a lot of interesting data. That he fails to make better use of it is regrettable but not a major deterrent for anyone wanting to learn a little more about Quebec while it is still with us.

HERRIOT . . .joyous

DURRELL . . . poppycock

E. D. Ward-Harris

Animals and Men

I have a confession to make. I have been prejudiced against the work of two widely read authors — Gerald Durrell and (dare I admit it?) James Herriot; the former because he is a zoo-keeper and I abhor zoos, the latter because I had convinced myself that he wrote whimsically, and whimsy (other than Carroll and Milne) is not my cup of tea.

A few weeks ago I received the latest books by both Durrell and Herriot, and I tossed them aside. But my wife, whose judgment I deeply respect, read them and urged me to follow suit, and I did so — on the same day.

To gain a balanced view I then rummaged around and unearthed other Durrell books, which I dutifully read. Then I went out and bought every other book Herriot had written. I'll return to Durrell in a moment. First, Herriot.

After basking in the warmth of his prose for several days I can only curse myself for a fool for not making his acquaintance sooner. I was completely bowled over by the flawless literary control of this admirable life-oriented country vet. Whether he employs humor, pathos or just plain insight to make his points, his stories express a joyous and affectionate acceptance of life, both animal and human.

In saying that it has been a pleasure and a privilege to live vicariously with a decent man whose character and temperament are as unusual as his literary ability, I realize I am not telling you anything you didn't know. Let me make amends by mentioning (if you don't already know that too) that his latest book, Vets Might Fly, is as engaging as his earlier work.

In a series of flashbacks, he relives veterinary and other experiences as a mental escape from the agonies of life as a wartime RAF cadet. The book ends with his arrival at Windsor for flight training — indicating that a sequel may be in the offing. I can hardly wait.

While Herriot's exemplary style, both as a human being and as a writer, captivated me the several books by Gerald Durrell I read served only to reinforce my antipathy towards the man and his work.

His earlier books about animals were mostly light, designed to keep his name in front of the public and to rake in funds for his zoo in Jersey, Channel Islands. The latest book — The Stationary Ark — was written for the same purpose, but as it is chiefly concerned with extolling the virtues of Durrell and his zoo, and has no literary pretensions, it affords me the opportunity to say my piece.

As a small boy Gerald Durrell collected and kept in captivity for his own pleasure a variety of wild creatures. This is not unusual. Collecting wild creatures is a phase many children pass through. But Durrell didn't pass through it. Little Gerald aged without growing up: his voice changed, he became corpulent, and he grew a beard —, but he never ceased to indulge his passion for depriving animals of their freedom.

In fact, before assembling the means to open his own zoo he spent ten years in various parts of the world acquiring animals for any zoological establishment that would pay him.

In The Stationary Ark he uses 156 pages in a plausible attempt to justify the unjustifiable. He writes that a zoo should be a conservation unit. What does that mean? It turns out that it means that zoo breeding of captured rare, and sometimes protected, animals allows for cosy inter-zoo trading without the need to deal with animal smugglers or mount a costly expedition to further ravage the wilds.

A zoo, Durrell continues, should be an educational establishment. He infers that children will become conservation-minded and respectful of wild animals only by visiting zoos, and he clearly considers films to be an inadequate substitute. This is poppycock.

I know that my frequent visits to the London Zoo as a child taught me much — and all of it was wrong. I learned that lions and tigers pad to and fro incessantly, that elephants give rides and perform tricks, that eagles merely perch, that bears stand in treeless pits begging for food, that racoons wash their food, that primates were there to entertain me with their cute monkey tricks.

I also learned that I was a superior being and that there was no reason to doubt the advice contained in Genesis: 28 (which has much to answer for). In those days (is it any different these days?) there was no one to interpret in modern terms the meaning of Jeremiah 1:6, or to teach me compassion for creatures behond bars, wire or glass, the bored, bewildered, wretched victims of man.

Ethologists, who are as threatening to zoologists as Darwin and T. H. Huxley were to theologians, have proved that the only way to learn about animals is to observe their behavioral patterns in the wild. The real job of conservationists is to complement these findings by preserving the environment to allow a given species to flourish.

Yes, argues the specious Durrell, but zoos like his are scientific laboratories equipped to breed endangered species and one day perhaps repopulate the wilds. More poppycock, and he knows it. Sir Peter Scott, a genuine conservationist, tried this with Nene geese only to discover that the desecration of the Hawaiian environment which had first decimated the flock has been allowed to grow worse, thus dooming the large flock he so laboriously built up and patriated.

Even some of Durrell's "facts" are faulty. "The first zoo gorilla birth was recorded in 1956," he writes. I saw the baby gorilla, appropriately named Jubilee, shortly after its birth in the London Zoo in 1935, and undoubtedly there were others.

I'll leave the final word to Desmond (The Naked Ape) Morris. In an article in Life magazine (Nov. 8, 1968) Morris — who, please remember, is a zoologist — hadn't a good word to say for zoos. "Medieval menageries that should be no more than a memory, a historical record, ancient monuments," he called them.

After stressing the enormous importance of feeding in the wild, a complex and necessary activity that all zoo animals are abruptly deprived of, also that the sameness and sterility of zoo enclosures deprive animals of vital psychological space, Morris had this to say:

"There is something biologically immoral about keeping animals in enclosures where their behavior patterns, which have taken millions of years to evolve, can find no expression . . . Everywhere you turn behavior-starvation faces you. Nesting, bed-making, bathing, dam-building, playing, scent-making, sleeping, wallowing, defecating, territorial patrolling, displaying, social grouping — all these patterns . . . are being frustrated and prevented from finding full behavioral outlet.

". . . Above all, social species must be allowed to live in natural social groups of the correct size and composition and not always in neat pairs, as if they were candidates for some ludicrous Noah's Ark, or, worse still, singly, in a painful solitary confinement."

The zoo in Jersey is admittedly better run than most but, as Morris attests, all zoos are heartless anachronisms where animals are driven psycho, so any comparison is tantamount to saying that the war in Vietnam was better than the Second World War, or vice versa, which is balderdash.

So is The Stationary Ark.

Krishnamurti: A Mysticism Too Remote for Most

By JULIAN REID

"In the evening it was there: suddenly it was there, filling the room, a great sense of beauty, power and gentleness." So reads the first entry in Krishnamurti's Notebook.

The date was June 18, 1961. Krishnamurti had never kept a diary before; but over the next seven months he made daily entries recording his states of consciousness and the reflections which rose naturally out of them. During this period he was on a lecture-tour, travelling to California, Switzerland, Paris, Rome, then back to his native India. But though the setting of the Notebook's entries alters, their tenor remains consistently the same. They are records, not of their author's physical itinerary, but of his continuing spiritual communion with higher levels of being.

Krishnamurit is one of the most impressive of contemporary mystics — and also one of the most inhumanly elevated. His teachings are lucidly persuasive; but they seem consistently pitched a notch too high for ordinary mortal ears. He is sage rather than saint, his voice tinged with a high-toned Bloomsbury priggishness. And yet he is blessed with a rare capacity to uplift and inspire.

This Notebook invites us to immerse ourselves in the clear, cold stream of his genius. It is disconcerting, at first, to find him consistently regarding himself, not as "I," but as a distant, impersonal "one" — and even more so to discover that he never refers to his companion of the moment by name, but always simply as "the other." Yet such apparent eccentricities merely indicate that Krishnamurti consistently practices the selfsame ideal of High Indifference which he so eloquently preaches.

The other face of this disciplined impersonality is made manifest in the luminous purity of his perceptions — and, above all, in the constantly recurring visitation of that "sense of beauty, power and gentleness" which pervades the entire Notebook from beginning to end.

Krishnamurti's entire consciousness, like that of all authentic mystics, is suffused with a continuing awareness that "there's a sacredness which is not of thought," in which, in moments of preternatural stillness, his mind is privileged to participate. "Thought cannot formulate it," he observes. "But there's a sacredness, untouched by any symbol or world. It is not communicable. It is a fact."

That colossal fact — "that unapproachable strength of otherness, the unknowable;" that vast, "impenetrable silence, clear, strong, penetrating," in which "love, death, creation are inseparable: you cannot have one and deny the others" — Krishnamurti approaches with characteristically dispassionate objectivity. Tellingly, he contrasts it with our customary psychic hyperactivity:

"The mind is always occupied with something or other, however silly or supposedly important. It is like that monkey, always restless, always chattering, moving from one thing to another and desperately trying to be quiet. To be empty, completely empty, is not a fearsome thing; it is absolutely essential for the mind to be unoccupied, to be empty, unenforced, for only then can it move into unknown depths. An occupied mind can never penetrate into its own depth, into its own untrodden spaces."

Meditation, for Krishnamurti, is no mere transcendental tranquilizer. "Meditation is the emptying of the mind of the known. It cannot be done by thought or by the hidden prompting of thought, nor by desire in the form of prayer, nor through the self-effacing hypnotism of words, images, hopes and vanities. All these have to come to an end, easily, without effort and choice, in the flame of awareness."

This is a hard teaching — too hard, perhaps, for most of us — and Krishnamurti's coldly compassionate sagacity represents an ideal few will feel tempted to emulate. Indeed, I suspect he may be rather too enamoured of the chill, clear heights, maintaining an excessive distance between himself and the turbulent flow of our common humanity.

Yet, despite such reservations, I know no book that draws the reader closer to the living soul of mystic consciousness than Krishnamurti's Notebook — and none where the essentials of Mystical discipline are set more firmly into the living context which alone can give them meaning.

Brilliant Flashes From Restless Mind

WOOLF . . . the letter as a work of art

It would be a misnomer in almost every other case, but a book critic may "review" the letters of Virginia Woolf, finding them altogether wonderful, in just the same way that he would review any major work.

For one thing, the greatest woman novelist of her day (and, come to think of it, any day, any gender) made even a bread-and-butter note a work of art, often tried out a word, a thought or a technique in an apparently casual epistle and, though she adapted for each recipient, was always Virginia Woolf.

That was a curious and enduring blend of captivating bitchiness, an occasional intellectual snobbery, a shining individuality and integrity and, always, a way with thoughts and words that are as fresh and original as if they were written yesterday. Virginia Woolf could be, at once, softly sentimental and bitterly acerbic — sometimes in the same letter. She was witty and profound, as feminine as crinoline, as tough as nails.

The first (of three) collections of her prolific letter-writing, also edited by Nigel Nicolson and titled The Flight of the Mind, covered the years from 1888 to 1912 when Virginia's genius was obvious, but undisciplined. They were a delight, taking her from childhood to the eve of her marriage at 30. Her naivete was both charming and touching. Very often they are teasing and kittenish with that tone of bantering that was her life-long way with friends.

There's much less of that in this second collection, covering the years from her 30th to her 40th birthdays, when she was a mature woman and the master of her craft. They are brilliant flashes of a restless mind, a pursuit that, in an unforgettable letter to Janet Case in 1919, accounts for the title of this edition. "There's the whole question, which interests me, "Virginia wrote, "of the things one doesn't say; what effect does that have? And how far do our feelings take their color from the dive underground? I mean what is the reality of any feeling? . . . And then there's the question of things happening, normally, all the time."

Both the first and second collections invite — or, perhaps, demand — a re-reading of Virginia Woolf's novels and the superb biography by her nephew, Quentin Bell. That a further collection of her letters is planned as well as a full version of her diaries by Oliver (Mrs. Quentin) Bell is a preview of good things to come.

Nicolson, who was assisted by Joanne Trautmann, an American professor, reports that more than 4,000 of Virginia Woolf's letters are now in his possession and that, as a result, this second volume has been an easier task than was the first. In any case he remains refreshingly free of academic pretence and this collection, like the first, is happily sparse on the tedious footnotes that might have tempted a more pretentious editor.

Certainly it was a time of major upheavals in Virginia's life and the larger world. In his introduction, Nicolson notes: "between 1912 and 1922 Virginia Woolf married, published her first three novels, twice went mad, and co-founded the Hogarth Press. The same years contained the First World War. It was a massive experience for someone so mentally frail. But the impression left by her letters is that she was stronger at the end of this decade than at the beginning, stronger in creative power, in social energy, in audacity."

Curiously, Virginia remained remote from the agonies of World War One. There is but fleeting reference to the change in her own life style. Many of the letters are, in fact, to her husband, Leonard, and are concerned mainly with what may have been the longest marital love affair on record. It's clear that the happiness of this marriage brought back Virginia Woolf from her continuing mental break-downs. "But for him," Nicolson writes, "she migh not have lived until she was 40" — an observation that Virginia's letters confirm.

It is a pleasure to the reader to find, among some challenging, cerebral, turgid prose, a brief love letter written in 1916 to Leonard: "Precious Mongoose . . . . I lie and think of my precious beast, who does make me more happy every day and instant of my life than I thought it possible to be. There's no doubt I'm terribly in love with you. I keep thinking what you're doing, and have to stop — it makes me want to kiss you so." Above all, Virginia was a woman.

There are notably off-hand references (and gaps, as well, in her correspondence) in her long bouts with madness, the first the occasion of her initial attempt at suicide. Yet Virginia's recovery in those years was spectacular. The letters, themselves, as Nicolson describes them, were a "frothing stream of written talk" and provide a portrait of an artist who never lost her interest in "things happening."

E.B White, writing of his own collection of letters, rues that, "a writer, writing away, can always fix things up to make himself more presentable, but a man who has written a letter is stuck with it for all time." We can only be thankful that Virginia Woolf lives on through hers.

Obscurity Deserved

By MARTIN LEVINE

I have a confession to make. Dozens of universally acclaimed authors, from whoever wrote Beowulf to Alexander Solzhenitsyn, do absolutely nothing to me. And it looks as if Christina Stead may have to join the list.

If not quite as famous as what's - his - name or Solzhenitsyn, Stead still has a formidable literary rep. Martin Seymour-Smith, in his recent Who's Who in Twentieth Century Literature, calls her one of Australia's most gifted novelists (she's an expatriate); praises her "mastery of dialogue" and "firmly controlled felinity"; notes that recognition began to come her way with the re-edition here, in the 1960s, of her long 1940 novel, The Man Who Loved Children and expresses "dismay about the practice of letters in our times" because she's slighted in other reference works.

My dismay stems entirely from Miss Herbert, but maybe I can get it under control with a plot summary. Eleanor Herbert Brent — she prefers her mother's maiden name for its aristocratic connections — is, as the English say, a beauty. She also is English, and we first find her, in her mid-20s (and the '20s or '30s of this century), holidaying with former schoolgirl chums.

Only in such feminine company, admired and gossiping, does she seem really happy; but her face and the figure of "a young Juno" bring the men running. Partly in delight at her own powers, partly to gain the experience needed by a writer, she sleeps with virtually everybody. She thinks she is showing that sex is natural, and the same whether or not one speaks of love while engaging in it, but from Stead's description of her infatuation with a homosexual, and the offensively jokey way she treats friends and lovers, we know that she is a naive prig.

When she marries, it is neither for love nor passion — both of which clearly scare her — but out of "down-to-earth" calculation and anxiety not to be an old maid. She gets what she deserves; an even more calculating Swiss named Heinz (or rather Henry, now that he expects to rise in English society), who is solely concerned with appearances. Soon there are two children, a secretive girl and an effete boy, whom, when Henry deserts them she catechises in contempt for their father.

At the same time, she has been struggling as a free-lance writer. Eventually she goes from ghosting articles on street planning to running a small literary agency. Work brings her as close as she gets to love with a gentle, dying publisher who collect macabre masochistic "curiosities." When she has a small stroke, she resolves that now she will get down to serious writing. But this is what she has been saying for the three decades through which we have suffered with her.

What is Miss Stead up to? She doesn't seem to have written a satire on British attitudes toward sex and marriage, for all the other women make more of a success out of life than Miss Herbert. On the other hand, can the sole point be the contrast between the heroine's voluptuous exterior and timid, rigid attitudes? And if it is, was it wise to make her quite so annoying — aimless, petty and self-deluding? The writing, furthermore, is wearyingly deadpan (and repetitious — the same character gets introduced on pages 4 and 23). Of course, female, or simply smarter, readers may find more point to the novel than I did. I am consoled by a distinctly smaller sense of urgency about tackling The Man Who Loved Children.

BUT KEEPS ON WRITING

Caldwell Outlives Fame

By THOMAS COLLINS

Erskine Caldwell and his books in recent years have been put on the shelf of life and literature, to be taken down only as a curiosity. Once acclaimed as a foremost writer, he has outlived his fame and now resides in a literary limbo bounded on one side by Tobacco Road and on the other by God's Little Acre.

Caldwell, although he continues to write and publish, has been paved over in recent decades, Reviewers pay little attention to his work; there are no large paperback sales, no auctions or movie rights, no huge advances.

What is left is an illustrious name that has gathered a lot of dust and a tall, spare old man (he is 73) who has lived too long to be shy and has knocked around too much to be courtly. He is, however, polite, interested and alert, and tolerant of a stranger's questions in connection with the promotion of his latest book, Afternoons in Mid America, an account of his recent travels on "the afternoon side of the Missippi."

It may not be destined for the bestseller lists, but it is selling "very well," according to his publisher, Dodd, Mead, and joins 51 other Caldwell books, many of which have been largely ignored by the public. Of his two greatest successes, written in the early 1930s, he says: "To me, it's like somebody else wrote them."

God's Little Acre sold 12 million copies and Tobacco Road also sold in the millions to a public more interested in their sexual content than their social protest. To a generation of schoolboys, they were the kind of books that were bought on the sly and concealed inside other books as they were read. Today, there is more soft porn in television commercials than in either book, but in their time they were capable of outraging the New York Society for the Supppression of Vice and other such groups. Massachusetts, for example is still not ready to let God's Little Acre cross its borders.

Caldwell did not set out to write dirty books about southern sharecroppers. "I didn't know any better," he said. "I was just writing a story as I knew it." The freedom that writers enjoy today to be as pornographic as they please can be a trap, he said. "If a young writer tries to just shock, and it becomes shock upon shock, what have you got? You've got to try to improve on the sensational and not just be imitative."

Caldwell is surprisingly caustic about writers as a species; he seems to feel that they are neither endangered nor possibly worth saving. "I've never been impressed by them as a group," he said. "I think they've overrated, uncouth, unsocial, difficult, obscene, dull and usually protesting or complaining about something." He does not exclude himself from the criticism.

Caldwell was born in a small town in Georgia not far from President-elect Jimmy Carter's Plains. "It was called Moreland," he said, "because that's all there was — more land." The son of a Presbyterian minister who was always on the move, Caldwell has never lost his taste for travel. As a young man, he held all sorts of jobs, and then went to earth on a five-year stretch in Maine, where he wrote the stories and the two books that made him famous. Caldwell and his fourth wife, the former Virginia Fletcher, now live in Florida when they are not on the road. He has never liked to stay too long in one place. "I keep moving so I won't die," he said.
